

POST-WAR SUBMARINES

Warfare generated substantial and often unintended advances in submarine technology. Submarines were developed to attack the enemy, but they are also an essential tool for intelligence gathering and are virtually immune to air and satellite attack by the enemy. Their high level of manoeuvrability enables them to operate undetected, even in the most hostile waters. Modern submarines are generally larger and more powerful than ever before, and they are now capable of operating in the most hostile waters, even in the Arctic.
