Designing a Place Called Home James Wentling, 2012-12-06 are often lined with garages in front of houses that are clearly more internalized in design some even taking on a fortress like appearance Today's new homes are technically superior in construction i.e. they are more energy efficient weather resistant and maintenance free However they also seem to lack the warmth and charm of prewar homes for which more construction dollars were spent on quality veneers but in features and other human scale details The postwar need for massive amounts of affordable housing for returning GIs helped to encourage building practices that could reduce on site labor and material costs in houses The accommodation of the automobile cost cutting movements and a variety of other trends caused a gradual decline in the human social and emotional qualities of postwar residential architecture This book will attempt to look at the issues and choices facing today's residential designers and homeowners and ask How can we make our new houses and neighborhoods more responsive to humanistic needs particularly in light of constant pressures to keep housing costs down This question will generally be addressed by comparing historical designs to those of today to see if we might be able to reconsider some old fashioned ideas in new housing designs

William C. Need to Know John G. Stackhouse Jr., 2014-05-30 How should a Christian think If a serious Christian wants to think seriously about a serious subject from considering how to vote in the next election to choosing a career from deciding among scientific theories to selecting a mate from weighing competing marketing proposals to discerning the best fitness plan what does he or she do This basic question is at the heart of a complex discourse epistemology A bold new statement of Christian epistemology Need to Know presents a comprehensive coherent and clear model of responsible Christian thinking Grounded in the best of the Christian theological tradition while being attentive to a surprising range of thinkers in the history of philosophy natural science social science and culture the book offers a scheme for drawing together experience tradition scholarship art and the Bible into a practical yet theoretically profound system of thinking about thinking John Stackhouse's fundamental idea is as simple as it is startling Since God calls human beings to do certain things in the world God can be relied upon to supply the knowledge necessary for human beings to do those things The classic Christian concept of vocation then supplies both the impetus and the assurance that faithful Christians can trust God to guide their thinking on a need to know basis
