Landsat earth resources satellite system was a project of The National Aeronautics and Space Administration that was created to collect data about earth resources from space The first satellite was launched in 1972 with great fanfare and high expectations The data proved useful for everything from finding oil to predicting harvests yet today the successful commercialization of the program is still uncertain Why To answer this question Pamela E Mack focuses on the negotiating process that went on among different parts of the space agency other interested government agencies and various organizations that were potential users of the data This formal and informal negotiating process she points out involved not only choices between alternative technologies and the satellite but also conflicting definitions of what the satellite would do The story is full of fascinating detail from the concerns of the intelligence community over civilian satellites looking at the earth to the politics of agricultural survey Pamela E Mack is Associate Professor in the History Department at Clemson University The U.S. Climate Change Science Program Climate Change Science Program (U.S.),2003 Department of the Interior and related agencies appropriations for 1988 United States.
