Markets in Early Medieval Europe Tim Pestell, Katharina Ulmschneider, 2003-12-01 Major sites such as Hamwic and Dorestad typically dominate any discussion of early medieval trade and emporia this study is altogether atypical in many ways Comprising nineteen papers taken from a conference held at Worcester College Oxford in 2000 the focus here is very much on the smaller more rural trading centres and inland markets of Northern Europe The contributors reflect very different approaches to the material including studies that examine up to date historical archaeological and numismatic evidence from Britain Denmark the Netherlands Norway and Sweden dating from the 7th to 9th century The authors consider the rather controversial use of metal detecting in identifying and defining new sites and patterns of interaction and exchange highlighting its positive contribution Contributors include Mark Blackburn David Griffiths Lars Jorgensen Michael Metcalf Julian D Richards Peter Sawyer and Astrid Tummuscheit

Power and Place in Europe in the Early Middle Ages Jayne Carroll, Andrew Reynolds, Barbara Yorke, 2019-12-17. This book reveals a high degree of organisational capacity in early medieval societies. It outlines a new agenda for assessing and interpreting early medieval power: how it was formed, how it functioned and how it developed across time, providing the basis for the kingdoms of the European Middle Ages. The Oxford Handbook of Anglo-Saxon Archaeology Helena

600-1150 Christopher Loveluck, 2013-10-24. Christopher Loveluck's study explores the transformation of Northwest Europe, primarily Britain, France and Belgium, from the era of the first post-Roman European Union under the Carolingian Frankish kings to the so-called feudal age between c. AD 600 and 1150. During these centuries, radical changes occurred in the organisation of the rural world. Towns and complex communities of artisans and merchant traders emerged, and networks of contact between northern Europe, the Mediterranean and the Middle and Far East were redefined with long-lasting consequences into the present day. Loveluck provides the most comprehensive comparative analysis of the rural and urban archaeological remains in this area for twenty-five years. Supported by evidence from architecture, relics, manuscript illuminations and texts, this book explains how the power and intentions of elites were confronted by the aspirations and actions of the diverse rural peasantry, artisans and merchants, producing both intended and unforeseen social changes.

State and Society in the Early Middle Ages Matthew Innes, 2000-04-24. This book, first published in 2000, is a pioneering study of politics and society in the early Middle Ages. Whereas it is widely believed that the source materials for early medieval Europe are too sparse to allow sustained study of the workings of social and political relationships on the ground, this book focuses on a uniquely well-documented area to investigate the basis of power. Topics covered include the foundation of monasteries, their relationship with the laity and their role as social centres; the significance of urbanism; the control of land the development of property rights and the organization of states community kinship and lordship justice and dispute settlement the uses of the written word violence and the feud and the development of political structures from the Roman empire to the high Middle Ages      The Long Morning of Medieval Europe Jennifer R. Davis, Michael McCormick, 2008

Scholars from Europe and North America convened at Harvard University in 2004 for an interdisciplinary conference aimed at Rethinking the Early Middle Ages What are the issues and techniques of research defining the field today and what will they be tomorrow
