The Microsoft Assistant is there to help you. Or you can hide it and just use the regular Help by pressing F1 function key or selecting Help. The earlier graphic shows the normal Help Screen complete with Contents, Answer Wizard, and Index. See an explanation for using Contents and Index in the next row.

Contents and Index

Contents is set up like a book with chapters and articles within a chapter. When trying to learn all you can about something, this will be a good way to cruise articles about this item.

The Index shows a comprehensive list of functions. It is designed for those who know what they want to do (the terminology) and just want to go directly to the "how to" without a lot of extra reading.
