

Introduction

This is the story of a road network and of the people who built it over the ages. You will not find the roads on any map, and they have never been given official numbers. However, there are many roads like them, and many that share their history.

This story is set in Western Europe, but roads were also built long ago in other parts of the world. The Royal Road of the Persians, in use from 3500 to 300 B.C., was more than 1,500 miles (2,400 kilometers) long. It was used by soldiers on the march. The road's surface was probably hard-packed soil, but one stone-surfaced section has survived in modern Turkey.

Fine roads were also built in ancient China. In 221 B.C. the Chinese emperor decreed that the roads used to carry the royal mail should be 50 paces wide. Five hundred years ago the Incas of South America also built long highways with tunnels, bridges, and causeways.

Today, major highways link cities around the world. In the United States alone there are more than 3,484,000 miles (5,607,000 kilometers) of surfaced road, used by more than 176 million motor vehicles.

Journeys on the Silk Road Through Ages—Romance, Legend, Reality Avijeet Bhattacharya, 2017-10-11 Journeys on the Silk Road Through Ages Romance Legend Reality is a compelling narrative about the legendary Silk Road down the ages It takes us back to the nearly forgotten times when the dusty long road was discovered by herders and nomads in search of pastures and oases It was a long trek into the unknown This gradually turned into the fabled Silk Road spanning from China and across Central Asia with its numerous trade routes staging posts caravanserais on the one hand and the rugged landscape through steppes across mountains deserts and nations on the other The Silk Road stood out like a great artery that sustained for centuries The Road with its routes conveyed not only commerce but also ideas and philosophy of the far east China to the far flung Roman Empire in the west drawing from and contributing to other regions and countries that fell along the way Turkestan Afghanistan India Persia Mesopotamia Palestine Phoenicia and Anatolia thus linking the ancient and the medieval worlds It was an enterprise of gigantic proportions the great highway witnessed trade in almost all products with silk precious stones porcelain metals and horses as chief commodities Of these silk was the foremost merchandise that merchants transported on camel caravans and upon mules from the Land of Serica Slaves too were traded Monks and warriors also walked along the trodden path Merchants exchanged goods which made trade possible bringing in a flow of wealth while monks and warriors exchanged philosophy ideas and statecraft despite conflicts and wars The narrative travels back to the times when the road started making history by joining imperial Xi an with imperial Rome a distance of more than 8 000kms during the period of China s Han Dynasty sometime around 200 BC This strangely endured till the present days of Communist China and OBOR deliberating the Chinese Puzzle The book is an adventurous amalgamation of history travel and the unanticipated and not merely a clich d travel account It presents a fascinating story of realms rulers travellers and merchants both ancient and modern with captivating collection of anecdotes lores and current realities from far and wide Its brilliant web makes the book immensely readable

Society and Culture in the Ancient World Mr. Rohit Manglik,2024-03-23 EduGorilla Publication is a trusted name in the education sector committed to empowering learners with high quality study materials and resources Specializing in competitive exams and academic support EduGorilla provides comprehensive and well structured content tailored to meet the needs of students across various streams and levels Making One's Way in the World Martin Bell,2020-02-28 The book draws on the evidence of landscape archaeology palaeoenvironmental studies ethnohistory and animal tracking to address the neglected topic of how we identify and interpret past patterns of movement in the landscape It challenges the pessimism of previous generations which regarded prehistoric routes such as hollow ways as generally undatable The premise is that archaeologists tend to focus on sites while neglecting the patterns of habitual movement that made them part of living landscapes Evidence of past movement is considered in a multi scalar way from the individual footprint to the long distance path including the traces created in vegetation by animal and human movement It is argued that routes may be perpetuated over long timescales creating landscape structures which influence the activities of subsequent generations In other instances radical changes of axes of communication and landscape structures provide evidence of upheaval and social change Palaeoenvironmental and ethnohistorical evidence from the American North West coast sets the scene with evidence for the effects of burning animal movement faeces deposition and transplantation which can create readable routes along which are favoured resources Evidence from European hunter gatherer sites hints at similar practices of niche construction on a range of spatial scales On a local scale footprints help to establish axes of movement the locations of lost settlements and activity areas Wood trackways likewise provide evidence of favoured patterns of movement and past settlement location Among early farming communities alignments of burial mounds enclosure entrances and other monuments indicate axes of communication From the middle Bronze Age in Europe there is more clearly defined evidence of trackways flanked by ditches and fields Landscape scale survey and excavation enables the dating of trackways using spatial relationships with dated features and many examples indicate long term continuity of routeways Where fields flank routeways a range of methods including scientific approaches provide dates Prehistorians have often assumed that Ridgeways provided the main axes of early movement but there is little evidence for their early origins and rather better evidence for early routes crossing topography and providing connections between different environmental zones The book concludes with a case study of the Weald of South East England which demonstrates that some axes of cross topographic movement used as droveways and generally considered as early medieval can be shown to be of prehistoric origin One reason that dryland routes have proved difficult to recognise is that insufficient attention has been paid to the parts played by riverine and maritime longer distance communication It is argued that understanding the origins of the paths we use today contributes to appreciation of the distinctive qualities of landscapes Appreciation will help to bring about effective strategies for conservation of mutual benefit to people and wildlife by maintaining and enhancing corridors of connectivity between different landscape zones including fragmented nature reserves and valued places In these ways an understanding of past routeways can contribute to sustainable landscapes communities and quality of life

a book for the reason which induces the making of this The papers here gathered were written to a daily newspaper the New York Journal of Commerce in the course of a correspondence which has extended over more than forty years Although often asked to gather them in a book my judgment has been that such letters are not good material for continuous reading in a solid book They were written for the purpose of a day served their purpose and I had no wish to recall them But they had been cut out and preserved by more than one person strangers to me who have severally written me that if I do not make a book of them they will Should such a book be made by another person it would perpetuate many sad errors of type and be a misfortune to the papers and to me There was but one way to protect the dead and long buried sketches namely to select some of them revise correct and edit them and make a book which I have done only because I did not want it made
