

DESIGNING YOUR HERB GARDEN

Well-grown herbs look even more stunning when used in a handsome design complemented by walks, walls, or accessories. A design also makes your garden much more than simply a place to grow plants. It becomes a fragrant, colorful, and comfortable outdoor place to sit, read, play, and entertain, and it grows into an asset that increases your property value.

The design you choose says a lot about your preferences and personality. Try a historical garden if you like a sense of tradition. Or install a classic formal herb garden, a look that never goes out of date. If you prefer to grow a wide variety of plants in a casual way, develop an informal cottage garden. Or tailor a contemporary garden to fit into small spaces or blend in with the rest of your landscape.

Read on in this chapter for ideas on how to pull together a beautiful and effective herb garden design. You'll learn how to make herb combinations that look and grow well together. Then you'll deal with woody plants, the supporting characters that give herb gardens height, structure, and character during winter. You'll be ready to devote some thought to your landscape — all the walks, walls, and other built structures in your garden. Then browse through some possible designs, and consider taking what you've learned and adding some low-maintenance features.

DESIGN CONSIDERATIONS

When you know which herbs you want to plant, think about how you can arrange them so they'll look great and grow their best. Consider their color and ornamental characteristics, time of bloom,
