New York ,1992 The Taste of Water Christy Spackman,2023-12-05 Have you ever wondered why your tap water tastes the way it does The Taste of Water explores the increasing erasure of tastes from drinking water over the twentieth century It asks how dramatic changes in municipal water treatment have altered consumers awareness of the environment their water comes from Through examining the development of sensory expertise in the United States and France this unique history uncovers the foundational role of palatability in shaping Western water treatment processes By focusing on the relationship between taste and the environment Christy Spackman shows how efforts to erase unwanted tastes and smells have transformed water into a highly industrialized food product divorced from its origins The Taste of Water invites readers to question their own assumptions about what water does and should naturally taste like while exposing them to the invisible but substantial sensory labor involved in creating tap water

Facts about Finland Matti Eskola,1996

Flavour Science Oskar A. Laaksonen,Johanna K. Ahola,Mari A. Sandell,2013-07-29 This study characterized the sensory properties in sensory laboratory and selected chemical compounds contributing to the pleasantness of cold pressed bilberry and crowberry juices We found a strong correlation between sourness acids and the liking of samples

Moreover bilberry juices were more pleasant than crowberry juices Many phenolic compounds correlated either with rough or with soft astringency Sourness is very important for berry liking and for masking astringency and bitterness of phenolic extracts
