Redesigning The Work Of Human Services:

Redesigning the Work of Human Services John O'Looney, 1996 Redesigning the Work of Human Services explores alternative organizational designs for the delivery of human services designs that emphasize collaborative governance and partnerships among public and private agencies local control and responsibility for results and the use of innovative information planning and community capacity building technologies This book redefines the debate about whether human services should be privatized or not The author suggests that the basic task of human services to enable families to socialize the young is one that can neither be fulfilled effectively by the state nor by private agencies Rather carefully crafted public private partnerships when combined with new accountability mechanisms and the sophisticated use of emerging information technologies are likely to offer more in the way of effective efficient and appropriate human services Because this work is solidly grounded in the literature on both human and business services the author's suggestions for major redesign are comprehensive and intelligently qualified Redesigning the Work of Human Services John O'Looney, Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations for 1996 United States. Redesigning the Process for Establishing the Dietary Guidelines for Americans National Academies of Sciences,

Engineering, and Medicine, Health and Medicine Division, Food and Nutrition Board, Committee to Review the Process to Update the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, 2017-12-16 What foods should Americans eat to promote their health and in what amounts What is the scientific evidence that supports specific recommendations for dietary intake to reduce the risk of multifactorial chronic disease These questions are critically important because dietary intake has been recognized to have a role as a key determinant of health As the primary federal source of consistent evidence based information on dietary practices for optimal nutrition the Dietary Guidelines for Americans DGA have the promise to empower Americans to make informed decisions about what and how much they eat to improve health and reduce the risk of chronic disease The adoption and widespread translation of the DGA requires that they be universally viewed as valid evidence based and free of bias and conflicts of interest to the extent possible However this has not routinely been the case A first short report meant to inform the 2020 review cycle explored how the advisory committee selection process can be improved to provide more transparency eliminate bias and include committee members with a range of viewpoints This second and final report recommends changes to the DGA process to reduce and manage sources of bias and conflicts of interest improve timely opportunities for engagement by all interested parties enhance transparency and strengthen the science base of the process

Redesigning the US Mental Health Care System Sydney S. Harris, Stephen M. Strakowski, 2024 What is commonly referred to in the U S as the mental health care system is not really a system at all While excellent programs exist in every state in every community across America the system is actually a set of fragmented services provided inequitably by a haphazard array of specialty providers often with inadequate resources and only tenuously connected to health care systems for other health needs Crisis is too often the first point of contact for people experiencing a mental illness while year over year increases in rates of anxiety depression traumatic stress and death from suicide and overdose have led many to characterize the current situation as a pandemic or epidemic of mental illness constituting a national emergency For youth and young adults in late 2021 this emergency was formally recognized by the U S Surgeon General in the first Advisory ever issued regarding the nation s mental health Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations for 2005 United States. Glisson,2018-07-13 It is widely acknowledged that many healthcare behavioral health and social service organizations provide less than optimal services and that the challenge of improving services depends on successfully changing organizational culture and climate However there are almost no organizational level strategies that have been tested with randomized controlled trials Building Cultures and Climates for Effective Human Services addresses the need for evidence based organizational strategies for improving human service quality and outcomes by uniquely describing the authors own case examples nationwide studies and randomized controlled trials to explain how organizational culture and climate can be assessed and changed The two authors use their decades of research and practice experience in assessing and changing human service organizations to explain how organizations can improve the services they provide using the authors ARC model which effectively removes service barriers and supports the implementation of evidence based practices and other innovations The book also blends case examples with research from nationwide studies regional experiments and randomized controlled trials to explain the ARC model of organizational effectiveness and how it works to improve services It provides a balance between theory empirical research and actual case examples to help researchers organizational consultants administrators and service providers gain a practical understanding of how culture and climate affect services and how they can be improved Furthermore the text describes the three ARC strategies each composed of multiple elements to 1 embed key organizational principles 2 implement core organizational component tools and 3 apply mental models to alter shared reasoning and beliefs that affect success No other organizational level strategies for improving services have been so well documented and tested Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies
