The Prehistory of the Concept of Attention Ciarán Mc Mahon, This thesis describes the origins and development of the concept of attention An introductory chapter reviews the relevant extant literature including an overview of modern theoretical framework provided Richards 1989 1992 and Danziger 1997 and the research most comparable to the current project by Smith 1992 Kaufmann 2000 and Goldstein 2000 from which a set of foundational protocols is derived It is argued that attention as a reified concept of reflexive discourse does not emerge in Western literature until the 17th century and only after three distinct discursive traditions have waned in influence Moreover it is argued that attention in any discursive form is fundamentally an artefact of the physiomorphic assimilation of the practice of reading The second chapter deals with the earliest characterisations of attention from an intersubjective perspective as a practice conducive to the living of a philosophically sound life From these beginnings two separate traditions emerge concurrently On one hand from a projective perspective attention is characterised as an aspect of another person's subjectivity to be influenced by certain means This perspective heavily associated with oratory is dealt with in chapters four and six On the other hand from a subjective perspective attention is characterised as universal to all people and part of one's subjective relationship with God and the world in general This perspective heavily associated with religion is dealt with in chapters three five and seven Both of these perspectives are seen to decline in influence in the early sixteenth century with the rise of humanistic and natural philosophical influences These developments the establishment of a conceptual approach to reflexive discourse and attention are treated in chapters eight and nine where a concept qua object of attention is seen to emerge The final chapter summarises and concludes with a rebuttal of possible objections to this thesis some general and specific derivations and implications of the current research for future scholarship Throughout the thesis an attempt is made to appreciate each occurrence of the object term in its discursive context and the author's social political philosophical religious and economic circumstances Fundamental to the development of the concept of attention is however the author's specific literary practices

The History of Media and Communication Research David W. Park, Jefferson Pooley, 2008

Strictly speaking James Carey wrote there is no history of mass communication research This volume is a long overdue response to Carey's comment about the field's ignorance of its own past The collection includes essays of historiographical self-scrutiny as well as new histories that trace the field's institutional evolution and cross-pollination with other academic disciplines The volume treats the remembered past of mass communication research as crucial terrain where boundaries are marked off and futures plotted The collection intended for scholars and advanced graduate students is an essential compass for the field

Unfolding Social Constructionism Fiona J. Hibberd, 2006-11-24

For more than half of the 20th century psychologists sought to locate the causes of behaviour in individuals and tended to neglect the possibility of locating the psychological in the social In the late 1960s a reaction to that neglect brought about a crisis in social psychology This crisis did not affect all social psychologists some remained seemingly oblivious to its presence others dismissed its significance and continued much as before But in certain quarters the psychological was re-conceptualised as the social and the social was taken to be sui generis Moreover the possibility of developing general laws and theories to describe and explain social interaction was rejected on the grounds that as social beings our actions vary from occasion to occasion and are for many reasons unrepeatable There is so it was thought an inherent instability in the phenomena of interest The nomothetic ideal was said to rest on individualistic cause effect positivism of the kind which arguably characterised the natural sciences but social psychology so it was said is an historical inquiry and its conclusions are necessarily historically relative Gergen 1973 Events outside psychology converged to give impetus to the crisis within
