George Bird Grinnell, 1892-01-01 The most shameful chapter of American history is that in which is recorded the account of our dealings with the Indians The story of our government's intercourse with this race is an unbroken narrative of injustice fraud and robbery Our people have disregarded honesty and truth whenever they have come in contact with the Indian and he has had no rights because he has never had the power to enforce any Protests against governmental swindling of these savages have been made again and again but such remonstrances attract no general attention Almost every one is ready to acknowledge that in the past the Indians have been shamefully robbed but it appears to be believed that this no longer takes place This is a great mistake We treat them now much as we have always treated them Within two years I have been present on a reservation where government commissioners by means of threats by bribes given to chiefs and by casting fraudulently the votes of absentees succeeded after months of effort in securing votes enough to warrant them in asserting that a tribe of Indians entirely wild and totally ignorant of farming had consented to sell their lands and to settle down each upon 160 acres of the most utterly arid and barren land to be found on the North American continent The fraud perpetrated on this tribe was as gross as could be practised by one set of men upon another In a similar way the Southern Utes were recently induced to consent to give up their reservation for another Americans are a conscientious people yet they take no interest in these frauds They have the Anglo Saxon spirit of fair play which sympathizes with weakness yet no protest is made against the oppression which the Indian suffers They are generous a famine in Ireland Japan or Russia arouses the sympathy and calls forth the bounty of the nation yet they give no heed to the distress of the Indians who are in the very midst of them They do not realize that Indians are human beings like themselves For this state of things there must be a reason and this reason is to be found I believe in the fact that practically no one has any personal knowledge of the Indian race The few who are acquainted with them are neither writers nor public speakers and for the most part would find it easier to break a horse than to write a letter If the general public knows little of this race those who legislate about them are equally ignorant From the congressional page who distributes the copies of a pending bill up through the representatives and senators who vote for it to the president whose signature makes the measure a law all are entirely unacquainted with this people or their needs

gateways for settlement Eventually they have grown to be highroads where the rich cargoes of development profiting by favouring tides floated to the outer world Man during all his wanderings in the struggle for subsistence has universally found them his friends and allies They have yielded to him as a conquering stranger they have at last become for him foster parents Their verdant banks have sheltered and protected him their skies have smiled upon his crops With grateful memories therefore is clothed for us the sound of such river names as Thames Danube Hudson Mississippi Through the centuries their kindly waters have borne down ancestral argosies of profit without number establishing thus the wealth and happiness of the people Well have rivers been termed the Arteries of Commerce well also may they be considered the binding links of civilisation Then by contrast it is all the more remarkable to meet with one great river which is none of these helpful things but which on the contrary is a veritable dragon loud in its dangerous lair defiant fierce opposing utility everywhere refusing absolutely to be bridled by Commerce perpetuating a wilderness prohibiting mankind's encroachments and in its immediate tide presenting a formidable host of snarling waters whose angry roar reverberating wildly league after league between giant rock walls carved through the bowels of the earth heralds the impossibility of human conquest and smothers hope From the tiny rivulets of its snowy birth to the ferocious tidal bore where it dies in the sea it wages a ceaseless battle as sublime as it is terrible and unique Such is the great Colorado River of the West rising amidst the fountains of the beautiful Wind River Mountains of Wyoming where also are brought forth the gentler Columbia and the mighty far reaching Missouri Whirling down ten thousand feet in some two thousand miles it meets the hot level of the Red Sea once the Sea of Cortes now the Gulf of California in tumult and turmoil In this long run it is cliff bound nine tenths of the way and the whole country drained by it and its tributaries has been wrought by the waters and winds of ages into multitudinous plateaus and canyons The canyons of its tributaries often rival in grandeur those of the main stream itself and the tributaries receive other canyons equally magnificent so that we see here a stupendous system of gorges and tributary gorges which even now bewildering were to the early pioneer practically prohibitory Water is the master sculptor in this weird wonderful land yet one could there die easily of thirst Notwithstanding the gigantic work accomplished water except on the river is scarce Often for months the soil of the valleys and plains never feels rain even dew is unknown In this arid region much of the vegetation is set with thorns and some of the animals are made to match the vegetation A knowledge of this forbidding area now robbed of some of its old terrors by the facilities in transportation has been finally gained only by a long series of persistent efforts attended by dangers privations reverses discouragements and disasters innumerable

Approaches to the African Novel Charles E. Nnolim, 2010 This Third Edition of Approaches to the African Novel is a child of necessity Because of the unfortunate death of the publisher of Saros International who issued the First Edition and high demand this third enlarged edition has become imperative Three new essays all previously published are added two expectedly on Achebe the father of the African novel and one on Mongp Beti's Mission to Kala which was partially anthologised in Contemporary Literary Criticism Volume 27 1984

Achebe's Things Fall Apart as an Igbo national epic has evoked a spate of reactions from critics of African literature especially the troika Chinweizu et al in Toward the Decolonization of African Literature. It was also anthologised in Modern Black Literature edited by S Okechukwu Menu 1971. The essay on Arrow of God whose structure and meaning has been largely avoided by other critics is included here for further airing. For gender balance as the previous volume contained no essays on women writers an essay on Flora Nwapa has been added. Since the novels discussed in this volume exclusively are on the African literature south of the Sahara the last essay on Peter Abrahams comes in to round out this collection of essays with a study of a south African writer for geographical balance.
