Current Controversies in the Biological Sciences Karen F. Greif, Jon F. Merz, 2007-02-23 In recent years advances in biological science and technology have outpaced policymakers attempts to deal with them Current Controversies in the Biological Sciences examines the ways in which the federal government uses scientific information in reaching policy decisions providing case studies of the interactions between science and government on different biomedical biological and environmental issues These case studies document a broad range of complex issues in science policy from the Human Genome Project to tobacco regulation and provide an accessible overview of both the science behind the issues and the policy making process The cases illustrate the different ways in which science and politics intersect in policy decisions as well as the different forms policy itself may take including not only regulatory action but the lack of regulation Among the topics examined are public and private research funding as seen in gene patenting reluctance to regulate even when a product has been proven unhealthy as in the case of tobacco a comparison of U S and international policy responses to genetically modified organisms and the competing interests at play in air pollution policy Each chapter includes shorter side essays on related topics for example essays on issues raised by the SARS epidemic accompany the detailed case study of the public health response to the anthrax laced mail received in the weeks after 9 11 This clear and

The Politics of Precaution David Vogel, 2012-04-29 The Politics of Precaution examines the politics of consumer and environmental risk regulation in the United States and Europe over the last five decades explaining why America and Europe have often regulated a wide range of similar risks differently It finds that between 1960 and 1990 American health safety and environmental regulations were more stringent risk averse comprehensive and innovative than those adopted in Europe But since around 1990 the book shows global regulatory leadership has shifted to Europe What explains this striking reversal David Vogel takes an in depth comparative look at European and American policies toward a range of consumer and environmental risks including vehicle air pollution ozone depletion climate change beef and milk hormones genetically modified agriculture antibiotics in animal feed pesticides cosmetic safety and hazardous substances in electronic products He traces how concerns over such risks and pressure on political leaders to do something about them have risen among the European public but declined among Americans Vogel explores how policymakers in Europe have grown supportive of more stringent regulations while those in the United States have become sharply polarized along partisan lines And as European policymakers have grown more willing to regulate risks on precautionary grounds increasingly skeptical American policymakers have called for higher levels of scientific certainty before imposing additional regulatory controls on business
