Rediscoveries And Reformulations:

International Relations, Political Theory and the Problem of Order N. J. Rengger, 1999-11-04 At the turn of the millennium and now after the fall of the Berlin wall the best way to map the trajectories of contemporary international relations is hotly contested Is the world more or less ordered than during the cold war Are we on the way to a neo liberal era of free markets and global governance or in danger of collapsing into a new Middle Ages Are we on the verge of a new world order or are we slipping back into an old one These issues are amongst those that have dominated International Relations Theory in the late 1980s and 1990s but they have their roots in older questions both about the appropriate ways to study international relations and about the general frameworks and normative assumptions generated by various different methodological approaches This book seeks to offer a general interpretation and critique of both methodological and substantive aspects of International theory and in particular to argue that International Relations theory has separated itself from the concerns of political theory more generally at considerable cost to each Focussing initially on the problem of order in international politics the book suggests that International Relations theory in the twentieth century had adopted two broad families of approaches the first of which seeks to find ways of managing order in international relations and the second of which seeks to end the problem of order It traces three specific sets of responses to the problem of order within the first approach which emphasize balance society and institutions and outlines two responses within the second grouping an emphasis on emancipation and an emphasis on limits Finally the book assesses the state of International Relations theory today and suggests an alternative way of reading the problem of order which generates a different trajectory for theory in the twenty first century The War Puzzle Revisited John A. Vasquez, 2009-07-23 A scientific explanation of the onset and expansion of war and the conditions of peace National Security Through a Cockeyed Lens Steve A. Yetiv, 2013-12 What are key mental errors that can undermine good decision making Drawing on four decades of psychological historical and political science research on cognitive biases this book illuminates key pitfalls in how we and our leaders make decisions It shows in five case studies of American foreign and energy policy that such errors a dozen different cognitive biases have been more important in shaping and impacting U S national interests than we currently understand In so doing it also sheds light on U S foreign policy toward and interests in the Middle East That story prominently features non psychological explanations but cognitive biases exercised by American and foreign actors also represent a slice of the story that is worth revealing As examples the book shows how the distorted cognitive lens of Al Qaeda leaders contributed to the September 11 attacks and the ongoing conflict with America and the West how overconfidence impacted America s decision to invade Iraq in 2003 and how short term thinking a prominent cognitive bias hurts America s ability to develop a comprehensive energy policy making the Middle East more important to the United States and enhancing its proclivity to be involved in the region The book is aimed chiefly at students and the lay public though academics may benefit from it Alker and IR Renée Marlin-Bennett, 2012-03-12

International Relations have rarely been considered a synthesis of humanistic and social sciences approaches to understand the complex connections of a global and globalizing world One of the few scholars to have accomplished this creative blend was Hayward R Alker Alker and IR presents a set of visionary and original essays from scholars who have been profoundly influenced by Alker's approach to global studies They build on the foundation he laid demonstrating the practicality and usefulness of ethically grounded theoretically informed and interdisciplinary research for producing knowledge They show how substantive boundaries can be crossed and methodological rules rewritten in the search for a deeper more contextualized approach to global politics This book will be of interest to researchers and students of international relations and global politics

The Social Construction of the Korean War Jennifer Milliken, 2001 In light of the recent declassification of state papers from Western Soviet and Chinese archives this intriguing book presents a re-examination of the Korean War The authors present a revealing analysis of North Korea's decision to invade South Korea in June of 1950 Soviet and American foreign policy during the war and Chinese intervention The book also shows how the standard explanations of the war in international relations theory inherited from foundational approaches are misleading or incomplete

Methodology and Emotion in International Relations Eric Van Rythoven, Mira Sucharov, 2019-06-20 This volume offers a state of the art study of the diverse methodological approaches and issues in the study of emotions in international relations research While interest in emotion and affect in IR has grown in recent years there remains an absence of sustained engagement with questions of methodology and method Although much of the field holds the emotions turn as laudable it is commonly seen as facing serious even prohibitive methodological challenges Using a common framework for making discussions of methodology and emotion mutually intelligible this work seeks to address this lacuna and will be of interest to students and scholars of international relations research methods and IR theory

Peace Figuration after International Intervention Gëzim Visoka, 2016-07-01 This book examines the adverse impacts of liberal peacebuilding in conflict affected societies It introduces peace figuration as a new analytical framework for studying the intentionality performativity and consequences of liberal peacebuilding The work challenges current theories and views and searches for alternative non-conflicted research avenues that are suitable for understanding how peacebuilding intentions are made how different events shape peace outcomes and what are the consequences of peacebuilding interventions Drawing on detailed case studies of peacebuilding in Bosnia and Herzegovina Kosovo and Timor Leste the book argues that attempts to build peace often fail to achieve the intended outcomes A figurational view of peacebuilding interventions shows that post-conflict societies experience multiple episodes of success and failure in an unpredictable trajectory This book develops a relational sociology of peacebuilding impact which is crucial for overcoming static measurement of peacebuilding successes or failures It shows that international interventions can shape peace but importantly not always in the shape they intended This book will be of much interest to students of statebuilding peacebuilding war and conflict studies security studies and IR

Agnew, 2003 Despite challenges to its domination the way modern world politics is conducted is structured by a set of understandings dating back to the rise of the European powers Here John Agnew systematically explores how Europeans in a position of global power imposed their ways and views on others through visualizing the world as a whole defining world regions as modern or backward seeing the nation statehood as the highest and best form of political organization and viewing world politics as the outcome of the pursuit of primacy by competing states Exploring the elements of geographical imagination and how they have come together in different historical and modern epochs this updated new edition examines the implications of recent world events such as September 11th continued expansion of the EU and NATO the near bankruptcy and failure of various states the re ignition of the Israeli Palestine conflict Providing a lucid analysis of how world politics has come to be practised in its present form Agnew identifies and argues for an alternative given the costs visited on the world in twentieth century by the practice of the modern geographical imagination
