ABSTRACT. Coral reefs are one of the world's most biologically diverse and productive ecosystems. However, these valuable resources are highly threatened by human activities. Satellite remotely sensed observations enhance our understanding of coral reefs and some of the threats facing them by providing global spatial and time-series data on reef habitats and the environmental conditions influencing them in near-real time. This review highlights many of the ways in which satellites are currently used to monitor coral reefs and their threats, and provides a look toward future needs and capabilities.

This false true-color image of Australia's Great Barrier Reef was acquired by the Multi-angle Imaging Spectro-Radiometer (MISR) instrument on August 26, 2000, and shows part of the southern portion of the reef adjacent to the central Queensland coast. The width of the MISR swath is approximately 380 km, with the reef clearly visible up to approximately 200 km from the coast. Image courtesy of NASA/GSFC/LARC/ISL MISR Team.
