Psychology Of Deductive Reasoning:

The Psychology of Deductive Reasoning (Psychology Revivals) Jonathan Evans, 2013-12-19 Originally published in 1982 this was an extensive and up to date review of research into the psychology of deductive reasoning Jonathan Evans presents an alternative theoretical framework to the rationalist approach which had dominated much of the published work in this field at the time The review falls into three sections The first is concerned with elementary reasoning tasks in which response latency is the prime measure of interest The second and third sections are concerned with syllogistic and propositional reasoning respectively in which interest has focused on the explanation of frequently observed logical errors In an extended discussion it is argued that reasoning processes are content specific and give little indication of the operation of any underlying system of logical competence Finally a dual process theory of reasoning with broad implications and connections with other fields of psychology is elaborated and assessed in the light of recent evidence

Human Reasoning Ruth M.J. Byrne, Jonathan St.B.T. Evans, Stephen E. Newstead, 2019-06-18 Deductive reasoning is widely regarded as an activity central to human intelligence and as such has attracted an increasing amount of psychological study in recent years In this first major survey of the field for over a decade the authors provide a detailed and balanced review of all the main kinds of deductive reasoning task studied by psychologists Topics covered include conditional and disjunctive reasoning the Wason selection task relational inference and reasoning with syllogisms and quantifiers Throughout the review a careful distinction is drawn between the main empirical findings in the field and the major theoretical approaches proposed to account for these findings Discussion of experimental findings is organized around three central questions What is the extent and limitation of human competence in deductive reasoning What factors are responsible for systematic errors and biases on reasoning tasks How is human reasoning influenced by the content in which logical problems are presented Four major classes of theory are discussed throughout the book The long established theory that people have a mental logic comprised of formal rules of inference is contrasted particularly with the recently developed mental model theory of deductive reasoning Explanations of many phenomena especially biases are also considered in terms of heuristic processes Finally consideration is given to accounts of content and context effects based upon the use of domain sensitive rules or schemas The book ends with a discussion of research on deductive reasoning in the context of the current debate about human rationality
