Criminal Shadows David V. Canter, 2000. What does a criminal reveal about himself when he commits a crime? A great deal, explains David Canter, psychologist and pioneer of the science of criminal profiling. Each criminal casts a murky yet indelible shadow over his act, unconsciously leaving behind clues about his identity and personality. Understanding the connection between the physical evidence at the crime scene and the criminal's personal idiosyncrasies and character traits holds the key to the scientific profiling of murderers and rapists. Publisher's description.

Criminal Shadows David Canter, 1995. Examines the techniques of psychological profiling used to identify serial killers.
