Fighting at Sea in the Eighteenth Century Sam Willis,2008 Our understanding of warfare at sea in the eighteenth century has always been divorced from the practical realities of fighting at sea under sail our knowledge of tactics is largely based upon the ideas of contemporary theorists rather than practitioners who knew little of the realities of sailing warfare and our knowledge of command is similarly flawed In this book the author presents new evidence from contemporary sources that overturns many old assumptions and introduces a host of new ideas In a series of thematic chapters following the rough chronology of a sea fight from initial contact to damage repair the author offers a dramatic interpretation of fighting at sea in the eighteenth century and explains in greater depth than ever before how and why sea battles including Trafalgar were won and lost in the great Age of Sail He explains in detail how two ships or fleets identified each other to be enemies how and why they manoeuvred for battle how a commander communicated his ideas and how and why his subordinates acted in the way that they did SAM WILLIS has lectured at Bristol University and at the National Maritime Museum in Greenwich He is also the author of Fighting Ships 1750-1850 Quercus

Private Warfare in the Age of Sail Daniel K. Benjamin,2013 Modern naval warfare is the exclusive province of government Until relatively recently however governments tolerated even encouraged private sector participation in maritime hostilities Naval and merchant vessels were not strongly differentiated from one another and neither type of vessel was well suited to all weather year round duty at sea When combined with rudimentary and relatively costly systems of taxation this gave monarchs an incentive to focus their naval ventures during good weather months and to rely on merchant ships as important supplements to the Crown's navy Thus until the eighteenth century privately owned and operated merchant vessels were used as men of war and they served in the war on enemy trade into the nineteenth century We seek to explain the observed variation in the key contractual provisions of privateer contracts by examining over 60 contracts from the period 1744 to 1807 gathered from the files of the Public Record Office in London We suggest reasons for many of the general patterns seen in the contracts notably we believe we have a remarkably simple yet powerful explanation for the enormous variation observed in the distribution of the prizes between the owners and crew We also provide a clearer picture of the variation in the distribution of prize shares among crew members using measures of inequality to compare different privateers' allotments Most importantly we have developed a method of using contractual provisions to infer the expectations of privateers regarding the prizes they were likely to capture We are then able to use these estimates to infer expected total earnings of seafarers at all levels of the chain of command One implication of these estimates is that crew serving on privateers could expect to earn substantially more than men serving on merchant ships For able seamen the privateering premium was at least fifty percent for higher ranks it likely was even greater
