

COLONIAL AND POSTCOLONIAL DISCOURSE: Cultural Critique or Academic Colonialism?*

Walter D. Mignolo
Duke University

Commenting on Patricia Seed's well-informed and useful review essay (Seed 1991) within a limited number of pages requires selectivity. I will first offer a brief summary of my reading of the essay and then discuss specific issues that have been of concern to me in the past decade.

Seed's "Colonial and Postcolonial Discourse" raises two distinctive topics. The introduction and conclusion are devoted to placing colonial discourse into contemporary scholarship and tracing its debts, complications, and differences with poststructuralism, subaltern studies, new historicism, and feminist theory. In between, five books are discussed, three on Latin America and two on the Philippines. After discussing the five books in terms of current trends in history, anthropology, and literary criticism, Seed offers her overall conclusion:

What all these works do to varying degrees is to achieve one of the functions of a critique: to posit an idea about the humanities disciplines—history, literary criticism, cultural anthropology—as more than decorative knowledge, as knowledge critical of the relations of authority within a society. The aim of the critique in each of these disciplines is different—economic relations of authority, cultural relations of authority (the canon), conventional political relations of authority. But the basic target of critique remains the same—the relations of authority in colonial and postcolonial states—and it is thus an enterprise of cultural and political criticism being carried out in a resolutely postcolonial era. (P. 200)

Because the whole spectrum of contemporary trends mentioned by Seed (from poststructuralism to new historicism, from subaltern to colonial studies) takes a critical stance toward knowledge, the reader may wonder about the differences of colonial and postcolonial discourse from other forms of critical enterprises of authority and authoritative discourses. Seed's view is that while the "two fields" share an interest in colonial

Islam and Postcolonial Discourse Esra Mirze Santesso, James McClung, 2017-01-27 Largely though not exclusively as a legacy of the 2001 attack on the World Trade Center Islamic faith has become synonymous in many corners of the media and academia with violence which many believe to be its primary mode of expression The absence of a sophisticated recognition of the wide range of Islamic subjectivities within contemporary culture has created a void in which misinterpretations and hostilities thrive Responding to the growing importance of religion specifically Islam as a cultural signifier in the formation of a postcolonial self this multidisciplinary collection is organized around contested terms such as secularism Islamopolitics female identity and Islamophobia The overarching goal of the contributors is to facilitate a deeper understanding of the full range of experiences within Islam as well as the figure of the Muslim thus enabling a new set of questions about religion s role in shaping postcolonial identity

Discourses of Postcolonialism in Contemporary British Children's Literature Blanka Grzegorzcyk, 2014-10-03 This book considers how contemporary British children s books engage with some of the major cultural debates of recent years and how they resonate with the current preoccupations and tastes of the white mainstream British reading public A central assumption of this volume is that Britain's imperial past continues to play a key role in its representations of race identity and history The insistent inclusion of questions relating to colonialism and power structures in recent children's novels exposes the complexities and contradictions surrounding the fictional treatment of race relations and ethnicity Postcolonial children's literature in Britain has been inherently ambivalent since its cautious beginnings it is both transgressive and authorizing both undercutting and excluding Grzegorzczuk considers the ways in which children's fictions have worked with and against particular ideologies of race The texts analyzed in this collection portray ethnic minorities as complex hybrid products of colonialism global migrations and the ideology of multiculturalism By examining the ideological content of these novels Grzegorzczuk demonstrates the centrality of the colonial past to contemporary British writing for the young

A Postcolonial Reading of Mark's Story of Jesus Simon Samuel, 2007-04-18 This unique contribution to Markan studies reads Mark's story of Jesus from a postcolonial perspective It proposes that Mark need not necessarily be treated in an oversimplified polarity as an anti or pro colonial discourse Instead it may be treated as a postcolonial discourse i.e. as a hybrid discourse that accommodates and disrupts both the native Jewish and the Roman colonial discourses of power It shows that Mark accommodates itself into a strategic third space in between the variegated native Jewish and the Roman colonial discourses in order to enunciate its own voice As an ambivalent and hybrid discourse it mimics and mocks accommodates and disrupts both the Jewish as well as the Roman colonial voices The portrait of Jesus in Mark which Samuel shows to be encoding also the portrait of a community exhibits a colonial postcolonial conundrum which can neither be damned as pro nor be praised as anti colonial in nature Instead the portrait of Jesus in Mark may be appreciated as a strategic essentialist and transcultural hybrid in which the claims of difference and the desire for transculturality are both contradictorily present and visible In showing such a portrait and invoking a complex discursive strategy Mark as the discourse of a subject community is not alone or unique in the Graeco Roman world A number of discourses historical creative novelistic and apocalyptic of the subject Greek and Jewish communities in the eastern Mediterranean under the imperium of Rome from the second century BCE to the end of the first century CE exhibit very similar postcolonial traits which one may add to be not far from the postcolonial traits of a number of postcolonial creative writings and cultural discourses of the colonial subject and the dominated post colonial communities of our time
