America at Risk Robert Perrucci, Carolyn C. Perrucci, 2009-06-15 In America at Risk The Crisis of Hope Trust and Caring Robert Perrucci and Carolyn C Perrucci identify the broad economic and technological changes that have led to the loss of high wage jobs declining opportunity and increased income and wealth inequality These changes have altered the way that Americans think about themselves their future and the lives of their children and neighbors Focusing on the erosion of trust hope and caring between and among Americans and their social institutions the authors confront the challenge by proposing policies that will build hope through jobs and wages in order to promote greater trust of institutions and more caring for the less fortunate Examining data from the past thirty year period Perrucci and Perrucci apply a critical sociological lens to view the dominant economic political and cultural institutions that have shaped the main social problems facing Americans They challenge Americans to act on behalf of their individual and collective interests by becoming informed and involved in developing new solutions to improve their lives

The Power of Hope Carol Graham, 2026-02-17 Why hope matters as a metric of economic and social well being In a society marked by extreme inequality of income and opportunity why should economists care about how people feel The truth is that feelings of well being are critical metrics that predict future life outcomes In this timely and innovative account economist Carol Graham argues for the importance of hope little studied in economics at present as an independent dimension of well being Given America's current mental health crisis thrown into stark relief by COVID hope may be the most important measure of well being and researchers are tracking trends in hope as a key factor in understanding the rising numbers of deaths of despair and premature mortality Graham an authority on the study of well being points to empirical evidence demonstrating that hope can improve people's life outcomes and that despair can destroy them These findings she argues merit deeper exploration Graham discusses the potential of novel well being metrics as tracking indicators of despair reports on new surveys of hope among low income adolescents and considers the implications of the results for the futures of these young adults Graham asks how and why the wealthiest country in the world has such despair What are we missing She argues that public policy problems from joblessness and labor force dropout to the lack of affordable health care and inadequate public education can't be solved without hope Drawing on research in well being and other disciplines Graham describes strategies for restoring hope in populations where it has been lost The need to address despair and to restore hope is critical to America's future
