Views from the Margins Kevin J. Callahan, Sarah Ann Curtis, 2008-01-01 What does it mean to be French What constitutes Frenchness Is it birth language attachment to republicanism adherence to cultural norms In contemporary France these questions resonate in light of the large number of non French and non European immigrants many from former French colonies who have made France home in recent decades Historically French identity has long been understood as the product of a centralized state and culture emanating from Paris that was itself central to European history and civilization Likewise French identity in terms of class gender nationality and religion mainly has been explained as a strong indivisible core against which marginal actors have been defined This collection of essays offers examples drawn from an imperial history of France that show the power of the periphery to shape diverse and dynamic modern French identities at its center Each essay explains French identity as a fluid process rather than a category into which French citizens and immigrants are expected to fit In using a core periphery framework to explore identity creation Views from the Margins breaks new ground in bringing together diverse historical topics from politics religion regionalism consumerism nationalism and gendered aspects of civic and legal engagement

The Dynamics of Regional Innovation Yveline Lecler, Tetsuo Yoshimoto, 2012 All over the world open innovation is emerging and requires much more interactions between different actors with different organizational cultures large firms and SMEs i e industry universities and research institutions i e academia as well as national and regional authorities for building the legal or incentive framework of innovation i.e government Certainly flows of knowledge between these three spheres which are also known as the triple helix have always existed but what appears to be new in an open innovation environment is the overlapping of their missions In many areas such multi actor interactions with overlapping roles did not emerge spontaneously as was the case with the United States Based on robust cases studied by researchers and practical experiences of personnel involved in innovation at public or private institutions this book successively discusses the policy framework in Europe and Japan the new role for universities due to intellectual property reform or technology transfer promotion the new challenges for firms in terms of licensing patents corporate venturing including entrepreneurship incubation venture capital or cross industry knowledge sharing All issues addressed in this book are clearly those toward regional innovation policies and practices that are open in nature It contains descriptions and analysis of the various approaches taken by industrial governmental and academic players in various regions of Japan Tohoku Tokyo and Europe France Belgium The mix of theoretical and empirical material collected in this book was first presented at an international symposium in Tokyo The dynamics of regional innovation is an on going issue and we are still standing at the threshold of this field of research It is exactly why such a book is needed now

The Regions and the New Europe Martin Rhodes,1995 The contributors argue that some regions such as Emilia Romagna Baden Wurttemberg and Rhone Alpes have been highly successful in launching regional development strategies Others such as the English and certain southern European regions lack the economic resources and institutional structures to follow these examples The book analyses the reasons for success and failure and considers the strategic development options open to the less developed European regions
