1. UNIVERSITY INFORMATION THAT IS NON-PUBLIC MUST BE PROTECTED

Non-Public Information at the university is classified as Regulated or Restricted. Definitions of these classifications can be found in the Definitions section of this policy. Examples and required control standards are included in the Protecting Information: Guide to Data Storage and Custodial Practices.

Throughout its lifecycle, all Non-Public Information stored, processed and/or transmitted at the university must be protected in a manner that is consistent with contractual or legal restrictions and is reasonable and appropriate for the level of sensitivity, value, and risk that the information has to the university or members of the university community.

Information that contains data elements from multiple classifications must be protected at the highest level of information represented. For example, a document that contains Regulated and Public Information must be treated as Regulated Information.

Non-Public Information must be secured against disclosure, modification, and access by unauthorized individuals. It must be:

- Secured at rest.
- Secured in transit.
- Securely destroyed in accordance with record retention policies and university procedures.

2. UNIVERSITY COMPUTING SYSTEMS, EQUIPMENT, AND NETWORKS WITH NON-PUBLIC INFORMATION MUST BE SECURED

Any university computing system, equipment, or network that is used by Authorized Users to store, process, or transmit university Non-Public Information must be secured in a manner that is consistent with contractual or legal restrictions and is reasonable and appropriate for the level of sensitivity, value, and risk that the information has to the university or members of the university community.

Principles of Computer Systems and Network Management Dinesh Chandra Verma,2010-01-23 As computer systems and networks have evolved and grown more complex the role of the IT department in most companies has transformed primarily to ensuring that they continue to operate without disruption IT spending as reported by a variety of studies shows the trend that most of the expenses associated with IT are related to the task of operating and managing installed computer systems and applications Furthermore the growth in that expense category is outstripping the expense associated with developing new applications As a consequence there is a pressing need in the companies and organizations to find qualified people who can manage the installed base of computer systems and networks This marks a significant shift from the previous trend in companies where the bulk of the IT department expenses were targeted on development of new computer applications The shift from developing new applications to managing existing systems is a natural consequence of the maturity of IT industry Computers are now ubiquitous in every walk of life and the number of installed successful applications grows steadily over the time Each installed successful application in a company lasts for a long duration Consequently the number of installed applications is much larger than the number of projects focused on developing new applications While there always will be new applications and systems being developed within companies the predominance of managing and operating existing applications is likely to continue
