Biography, French, the study of a person's life, from birth to death, usually written by a biographer. The word is derived from the Greek bios (life) and grapho (to write). The first biographies were written by ancient Greek and Roman writers. The modern biography is a more detailed and accurate account of a person's life, often based on research and interviews with people who knew the subject. The biography is a popular form of literature, and many famous people have had their lives written about. The biography is also an important part of history, as it helps us to understand the lives of the people who shaped the world.

Architecture, the art or science of designing and constructing buildings and other structures. The word is derived from the Greek architektō (to build). Architecture is a branch of the visual arts, and it involves the use of a variety of materials and techniques to create structures that are both functional and aesthetically pleasing. The history of architecture is long and varied, with different styles and techniques developing in different parts of the world. The modern architect is a professional who is trained in the principles of design and construction, and who is responsible for creating the plans and specifications for buildings and other structures. The architect's role is to create a vision for a building, and to ensure that it is built to the highest standards of quality and safety.
