Science in the Romantic Era David Knight,2016-03-31 First published in 1998 The Romantic Era was a time when society religion and other beliefs and science were all in flux The idea that the universe was a great clock and that men were little clocks all built by a divine watchmaker was giving way to a more dynamic and pantheistic way of thinking A new language was invented for chemistry replacing metaphor with algebra and scientific illustration came to play the role of a visual language deeply involved with theory A scientific community came gradually into being as the 19th century wore on The papers which compose this book have appeared in a wide range of books and journals together with the new introduction they illuminate science and its context in the Romantic Era and follow its effects in the 19th century Thomas Hardy and the Restoration of Rampisham Church, Dorset C. Archaeology, Economy and Society David A. Hinton,2002-03-11 Many books have been written on particular aspects of medieval archaeology or on particular parts of the period but synthesis across the whole spectrum has not been attempted before The aim of this book is to examine the contribution that archaeology can make to an understanding of the social economic religious and other developments that took place in England from the migrations of the fifth and sixth centuries to the beginning of the Renaissance showing how society and economy evolved in that time span Drawing on the latest available material the book takes a chronological approach to the archaeological material of the post Roman period in order to emphasize the changes that can be observed in the physical evidence and some of the reasons for them that can be suggested The environment in which people functioned and how they expressed themselves for example in their houses and burial practices their pottery and their clothes show how they were constrained by social customs and economic pressures

Roman and Medieval Exeter and their Hinterlands Stephen Rippon,Neil

Holbrook, 2021-04-30 This first volume presenting research carried out through the Exeter A Place in Time project provides a synthesis of the development of Exeter within its local regional national and international hinterlands Exeter began life in c AD 55 as one of the most important legionary bases within early Roman Britain and for two brief periods in the early and late 60s AD Exeter was a critical centre of Roman power within the new province When the legion moved to Wales the fortress was converted into the civitas capital for the Dumnonii Its development as a town was however relatively slow reflecting the gradual pace at which the region as a whole adapted to being part of the Roman world The only evidence we have for occupation within Exeter between the 5th and 8th centuries is for a church in what was later to become the Cathedral Close In the late 9th century however Exeter became a defended burh and this was followed by the revival of urban life Exeter's wealth was in part derived from its central role in the south west's tin industry and by the late 10th century Exeter was the fifth most productive mint in England Exeter's importance continued to grow as it became an episcopal and royal centre and excavations within Exeter have revealed important material culture assemblages that reflect its role as an international port
