belief Conservation Chemistry Ted Lister, Janet Renshaw, 2004 This book is divided into three sections dealing with the conservation of plastics stone and wood It provides teaching and learning materials that deal with familiar chemistry in an unfamiliar context it also helps to show how the chemical sciences play a part in many unexpected areas of life Many people think of objects made of plastic as throwaway and do not consider them as collectable items or ones that might be found in museums In fact there are increasing numbers of plastic objects in museums as well as in private collections and many are increasing in value To give just one example some Barbi TM dolls can change hands for thousands of pounds it is also a misconception that plastics do not decay easily many of them do and this raises issues about how best to preserve them This section is set in a context of the collection care identification and display of objects in museums and by private collectors The section on stone focuses on a case study In order to prevent damage to a stone object conservation scientists sometimes surround the object with filter paper soaked in pure water This is called poulticing Conservation scientists at the British Museum wanted to investigate the poulticing process to see how effective it was at removing salts and to find out whether previous treatment of the stone affected the efficiency of the removal process The section on wood focuses on the Mary Rose a wooden Tudor warship that sank off Portsmouth in 1545 In 1982 the hull was raised and since then has been undergoing conservation treatment in a former dry dock at Portsmouth Over 19 000 artefacts were recovered The material processed here looks at the chemistry of the decay processes and the methods used to conserve the wood of the Mary Rose s hull and some of the other materials involved Elizabethan Sea-Dogs William Wood, 2018-04-05 Reproduction of the original Elizabethan Sea Dogs by William Wood
