Practical Management of Thyroid Cancer Ernest L. Mazzaferri, Clive Harmer, Ujjal K. Mallick, Pat Kendall-Taylor, 2006-06-22 Cancer of the thyroid gland may be a less common condition than carcinoma of the breast lung or colon but it occurs with sufficient frequency to constitute a major problem that is of concern to general practitioners physicians and particularly surgeons Some idea of the frequency of thyroid carcinoma is given by its incidence in the United States Every year some 26 000 patients are diagnosed there as suffering from thyroid cancer Comparable figures apply to most countries in Europe although the incidence does vary somewhat from country to country perhaps depending on the endogenous iodine intake Of the 21 000 patients diagnosed annually in the United States two thirds will be women and some 800 will die of the disease during the year This book should do much to improve the outcome in the treatment of thyroid cancer First because it is written by a small team of experts of international repute Secondly their wide experience of the condition allows them to write with authority and thirdly they express their views in clear and commendable English

Thyroid Cancer Glenn D. Braunstein, 2011-11-09 The American Cancer Society recently estimated that about 45 000 new cases of thyroid cancer will be diagnosed in the United States with three quarters occurring in women The overall 5 year survival rate is about 97% making it one of the least lethal cancers We are experiencing an epidemic of well differentiated thyroid cancer in part due to the widespread use of imaging modalities that detect thyroid nodules and microcarcinomas. Concurrently there have been a number of recent advances in surgical treatment as well as diagnostic modalities that allow us to detect small amounts of residual local and metastatic disease. Multiple academic organizations have developed consensus guidelines for the management of thyroid cancer occasionally with conflicting recommendations.
