

A close-up photograph of a tree trunk covered in thick, dark brown, gnarled bark. Numerous large, round, brown fruits hang from the tree, some directly from the trunk and others from thin, leafless branches. The fruits have a textured, slightly bumpy surface. In the center of the image, a small green plant with several leaves is growing out of the bark. The background is a soft-focus view of green foliage.

Beyond the Science of Reading Natalie Wexler,2025-01-30 In this provocative and timely book education writer Natalie Wexler argues that the best way to end the reading wars is to recognize that learning to read is inextricably linked to learning in general The science of reading movement has done much to improve instruction in foundational skills But that hard won progress may be reversed unless we also help children acquire the knowledge and vocabulary they need to understand complex text At the same time the science of learning movement has introduced many educators to evidence based teaching principles that can be effective for all students In Beyond the Science of Reading Wexler addresses a missing piece of the conversation the ways in which typical reading comprehension and writing instruction conflict with those principles Wexler also offers practical solutions for bringing science informed literacy instruction to scale and reveals why Teaching phonics isn t enough to create proficient readers Building knowledge is the key to unlocking reading comprehension Writing instruction holds untapped potential to boost literacy and learning Instruction grounded in cognitive science can narrow achievement gaps Current curriculum evaluation methods may be steering schools wrong Beyond the Science of Reading charts a bold path forward with a new way to equip all children to read with fluency understanding and joy This is an essential resource for educators policymakers parents and anyone who cares about the future of literacy and equity in the United States
