A Law of Peoples for Recognizing States Chris Naticchia, 2016-11-02 Which political entities should the international community recognize as member states granting them the rights and powers of statehood and entitling them to participate in formulating adjudicating and implementing international law What criteria should it use and are those criteria defensible From Kosovo Palestine and Taiwan to South Sudan Scotland South Ossetia Abkhazia and Catalonia these questions continuously arise and constantly challenge the international community for a consistent principled stance In response to this challenge Chris Naticchia offers a social contract argument for a theory of international recognition a normative theory of the criteria that states and international bodies should use to recognize political entities as member states of the international community Regardless of whether political entities adequately respect human rights or practice democracy he argues we must recognize a critical mass of them to get international institutions working Then we should recognize secessionist entities that suffer from persistent grave and widespread human rights abuses by their government and under certain conditions minority nations within multinational states that seek independence We must also recognize entities whose recognition would contribute to the economic development of the least well off entities Drawing on the social contract tradition and developing a broadly Rawlsian view A Law of Peoples for Recognizing States will both challenge and appeal to a broad readership in political philosophy international law and international relations
