Practice Effect:

Laboratory Psychology Julia Nunn, 1998 Experimental design is important enough to merit a book on its own without statistics that instead links methodology to a discussion of how psychologists can advance and reject theories about human behaviour. The objective of this book is to fulfil this role. The first four chapters lay the foundations of design in experimental psychology. The first chapter justifies the prominent role given to methodology within the discipline whilst chapters two and three describe between subject and within subject designs. Chapter four compares and contrasts the traditional experimental approach with that of the quasi experimental or correlational approach concluding that the consequences of not recognizing the value of the latter approach can be far reaching. The following three chapters discuss practical issues involved in running experiments. The first of these offers a comprehensive guide to the student researcher who wants to construct a good questionnaire including a discussion of reliability and validity issues. The next chapter considers the basic tools of psychological research whilst both discussing the theoretical problem of how a sample from a population is chosen and offering useful hints on the practical issue of finding adequate populations from which to select participants. The next chapter considers ethical practice within psychological research written in large part so that psychology students will be better able to anticipate ethical problems in their studies before they occur. The final two chapters consider reporting and reading psychological papers. Chapter eight details what should and should not be included in a laboratory report. The contributors use their collective experience of marking numerous lab reports to highlight common errors and provide solutions. Finally chapter nine describes the various elements of a journal article including tips on how to get the best out of your journal reading.

Practice, Practice Theory and Theology Kirstine Helboe Johansen, Ulla Schmidt, 2022-05-09 How might practice theories and engagement with practice contribute to and advance theological study of religion and religious life and practices. This volume explores and discusses how theological engagement with practice theoretically as well as empirically might profit from theories of practice developed in disciplines such as philosophy sociology education and organisational studies during the recent decades but so far scarcely employed within theology. In part I the volume unfolds key components of practice theory especially as they have more recently been developed within sociological practice theories reflect on their significance and potential with regard to theology. In part II these perspectives are employed in the study of concrete religious practices established as well as experimental religious practices and collective as well as individual ones. By unfolding connections between theology and practice theories and reflecting on practice theories analytical and theoretical potential for theological study of religion the book will be of interest for any scholar in the study of contemporary religion and practical theology.

Practitioner's Guide to Evaluating Change with Intellectual Assessment Instruments Robert J. McCaffrey, Holly James Westervelt, 2013-03-14 While conducting research on intellectual and neuropsychological performance of various patient populations across time we became aware of the lack of information concerning practice effects associated with many widely used assessment instruments Although test retest data were available for almost all of these instruments it typically came in the form of correlation coefficients and mean changes in performance between assessments was often absent In a 1995 article McCaffrey Westervelt 1995 we discussed a number of issues relevant to serial neuropsychological and intellectual assessment and concluded that clinical neuropsychological practitioners had few guidelines to assist them in interpreting change in a patient's performance across assessments This volume represents our efforts at reviewing the literature between 1970 and 1998 and extracting the reported information on practice effects The tables include the assessment instrument used information on the subject patient groups the sample size fu gender age intervention interval between the assessments scores at both assessment points and the citation The tables reflect the existing published literature within intellectual assessment and therefore some instruments e g Wechsler tests comprise a majority of the tables whereas others e g Raven's Progressive Matrices Stanford Binet do not The test index is arranged by the name of the test as reported in the specific article We caution readers to refer to the original articles if additional or more specific information is needed
