formalism index predict property rights variation better than its openness to international trade its religion its ethnic diversity natural endowments or its political system However these results are driven by the inclusion of former socialist economies in the sample When the authors exclude the former socialist economies legal origin explains considerably less than openness to trade and endowments Examining a broader set of variables for robustness they again find that when they exclude former socialist countries legal origin explains comparatively little of the variation in perceptions of judicial efficiency corruption taxes and regulation street crime and financing Cover verso

Theological Incorrectness Jason Slone, 2007-12-03 Why do religious people believe what they shouldn't not what others think they shouldn't believe but things that don't accord with their own avowed religious beliefs D Jason Slone terms this phenomenon theological incorrectness He argues that it exists because the mind is built in such a way that it's natural for us to think divergent thoughts simultaneously Human minds are great at coming up with innovative ideas that help them make sense of the world he says but those ideas do not always jibe with official religious beliefs From this fact we derive the important lesson that what we learn from our environment religious ideas for example does not necessarily cause us to behave in ways consistent with that knowledge Slone presents the latest discoveries from the cognitive science of religion and shows how they help us to understand exactly why it is that religious people do and think things that they shouldn't
