learners in the art education sector Color Expressions: an Art Educational Voyage Dr. Lonnie G. Ford, 2009-08-28 Several years ago I enrolled in a graduate course on educational research that focused on closing the achievement gap for African American children. The course was structured to explore issues, causes, and concerns for the achievement gap. Studying different educational outcomes, reading books, and articles, we regularly shared our insights about some leading causes. Most importantly, we were instructed to stay within our subject areas when finding any contributions to that gap. In my attempt to complete the assignment of researching possible causes in my discipline of art education, I found myself frustrated and angry. Why? There were no research studies exploring how art education was a part of the equation leading to solutions in closing the gap. In addition, there were no basic instructions or curricula designed to make connections to the art student to develop critical thinking skills or to incorporate the use of students' life experiences for learning. Furthermore, I felt that art education was used as a testing ground in urban schools like the Chicago Public Schools, using Teaching Artists to teach art with no teaching certification or teaching qualifications. Booth 2003: The purpose of this approach was to use their knowledge and practices of art to influence change in students' learning. This kind of experiment branched away from any real effort to integrate art education and truly recognize it as a viable core subject area. While conducting research for the course, I found that researchers defined the achievement gap between white and African American students solely in terms of the four core subjects of math, science, social studies, and language arts, with no attention given to art education. e.g. Berlak 2001, Honig 2001, Limn 2000, Sacks 2000. A study by the National Black Caucus, entitled "Closing the Achievement Gap: Improving Education Outcomes for African American Children," November 2001, reports: "Make improving the literacy skills of students a top priority. Students who cannot read will experience little success in school. Reading is the key to academic achievement in every subject, ranging from math and English to science and history. We must put reading first by finding initiatives and programs designed to strengthen the reading skills of students, particularly low-performing students." Again, there was no mention of art. As both an African American and an art teacher, I found it very disturbing that the recommendations of many national and local art educational organizations and schools failed to address the importance of teaching art education in African American urban school settings. My dissertation research ultimately arose from this concern. Celebrating Pluralism F. Graeme Chalmers, 1996-01-01 Educational trends will change and research agendas will shift, but art teachers in public institutions will still need to educate all students for multicultural purposes, argues Chalmers in this fifth volume in the Occasional Papers series. Chalmers describes how art education programs promote cross-cultural understanding, recognize racial and cultural diversity, enhance self-esteem in students' cultural heritage, and address issues of ethnocentrism, stereotyping, discrimination, and racism. After providing the context for multicultural art education, Chalmers examines the implications for art education of the broad themes found in art across cultures. Using discipline-based art education as a framework, he suggests ways to design and implement a curriculum for multicultural art education that will help students find a place for art in their lives Art educators will find Celebrating Pluralism invaluable in negotiating the approach to multicultural art education that makes the most sense to their students and their communities The History of Art Education Albert Arthur Anderson (Jr.), Paul Erik Bolin, 1997 □□□□□□□□□□--□□□□□□□□□□, 1995 The Journal of Social Theory in Art Education, 1991 Journal of Multi-cultural and Cross-cultural Research in Art Education, 1998

Art History and Education Stephen Addiss, Mary Erickson, 1993 Guided by Stephen Addiss's grounding in art history scholarship and Mary Erickson's expertise in art education theory and practice this volume approaches the issue of teaching art history from theoretical and philosophical as well as practical and political standpoints In the first section Addiss raises issues about the discipline of art history In the second Erickson examines proposals about how art history can be incorporated into the general education of children and offers some curriculum guides and lesson plans for art educators
