Modelling Crop Weed Interactions:

Modelling Crop-weed Interactions Martin J. Kropff, H. H. van Laar, 1993 General introduction Empirical models for crop weed competition Eco physiological models for crop weed competition Mechanisms of competition for light Mechanisms of competition for water Mechanisms of competition for nitrogen Eco physiological characterization of the species Understanding crop weed interaction in field situation The impact of environmental and genetic factors Practical applications

Crop-Weed Interactions M. Kropff, 1993 Competition between plants for the capture of the essential resources for plant growth i.e. light water and nutrients determines the performance of both natural and agricultural ecosystems The topic has been studied extensively by ecologists and physiologists leading to the development of several approaches to describe the outcome of competition This book reviews these modelling approaches and their potential for predicting yield loss as a result of crop weed competition The authors provide a detailed description of the model INTERCOM and of methods to parameterize and evaluate the model using experimental data Examples are given of how the model can be used to understand the effects of weeds on crops in field situations

Decision Support Systems for Weed Management Guillermo R. Chantre, José L. González-Andújar, 2020-07-31 Weed management Decision Support Systems DSS are increasingly important computer based tools for modern agriculture Nowadays extensive agriculture has become highly dependent on external inputs and both economic costs as well the negative environmental impact of agricultural activities demands knowledge based technology for the optimization and protection of non renewable resources In this context weed management strategies should aim to maximize economic profit by preserving and enhancing agricultural systems Although previous contributions focusing on weed biology and weed management provide valuable insight on many aspects of weed species ecology and practical guides for weed control no attempts have been made to highlight the forthcoming importance of DSS in weed management This book is a first attempt to integrate concepts and practice providing a novel guide to the state of art of DSS and the future prospects which hopefully would be of interest to higher level students academics and professionals in related areas

Applications of Systems Approaches at the Field Level M.J. Kropff, Paul Teng, P.K. Aggarwal, Johan Bouma, B.A.M Bouman, John W. Jones, H.H. Van Laar, 1997-01-31 Systems approaches for agricultural development are needed to determine rational strategies for the role of agriculture in national development Mathematical models and computer simulation provide objective tools for applying science to determine and evaluate options for resource management at field farm and regional scales However these tools would not be fully utilizable without incorporating social and economic dimensions into their application The second international symposium Systems Approaches for Agricultural Development SAAD held in Los Ba os 6 8 December 1995 fostered this link between the biophysical sciences and the social sciences in the selection of keynote papers and oral presentations a selection of which are included in these books The contents further reflect how systems approaches have definitely moved beyond the research mode into the application mode

The large number and high quality of interdisciplinary research projects reported from different parts of the globe to determine land use options that will meet multiple goals and yet sustain natural resource bases is a key indicator of this coming of age. At the farm level where trade off decisions between processes and products commodities feature strongly much progress is also evident in the development of systems based tools for decision making. At the field level optimization of resource use and minimizing environmental effects has become of major concern for which systems approaches are indispensable. The books of which Volume I deals with regional and farm studies level and Volume II with field level studies will be of particular interest to all agricultural scientists and planners as well as students interested in multidisciplinary and holistic approaches to agricultural development.

Potato Ecology And modelling of crops under conditions limiting growth
A.J. Haverkort, D.K.L. MacKerron, 2012-12-06 Potato is the fourth major staple food in the world and is still rapidly gaining importance especially in the tropics. In May 1994 the second international potato modelling conference was held in Wageningen the Netherlands as a summerschool of the C T de Wit Graduate School. The conference was sponsored by DLO SCRI SSCR W AU and the LEB Fund. Over 80 scientists participated coming from 16 countries. Of each crop physiological and modelling subject a leading scientist was requested to write a review of the most recent developments in his or her field. The reviews with highlights from the authors own work are such that the physiological work described is of interest to the modeller and the modelling work to the crop physiologist. Applications of the quantitative approach are also reviewed in the concluding chapters that deal with decision support systems breeding and agro ecological zoning. An outstanding point of this book is that both the crop ecology and the modelling of a broad range of biotic and abiotic factors are treated by scientists representing groups which are specialized in the subject. The two related disciplines met during the conference and thus wrote the chapters with each other's interest in mind. The book highlights the limitations for potato growth and development from the viewpoints of both the crop physiologist and the crop systems analyst.

Non-chemical Weed Management Mahesh K. Upadhyaya, Robert E. Blackshaw, 2007 The increase in organic farming and concerns about potential negative effects on human health and the environment is creating a demand for pesticide free food and alternative weed management techniques. This book provides a comprehensive examination of non chemical weed management.

Crop-soil Simulation Models William Stephens, 2002-07-22 The use of crop soil modelling has so far been mainly confined to the research community. Practical applications have occurred in the areas of decision tools for irrigation studies and pest management. However there is potential to increase its applied use. This book reviews progress in crop soil simulation modelling and assesses its application to agriculture in developing countries. It is based on work sponsored by the Natural Resources Systems Programme of the UK Department for International Development.

Advances in integrated weed management
Dr Per Kudsk, 2022-04-26 Summarises the current advances in IWM such as the use of technology to allow for more informed decision making e.g. decision support systems DSS and sensor technology. Discusses the challenges continually faced by the sector including herbicide resistance invasive species climate change and how best to deploy the range of non chemical control methods available Provides examples of the practical application of IWM and its optimisation in the field on different crops cereals vegetables pasture grasslands     Precision Agriculture John V. Lake,Gregory R. Bock,Jamie A. Goode,2008-04-30 This book investigates new agricultural systems such as organic and green manuring as well as integrated pest management practices and looks at how they can improve farm productivity against the enhancements for the environment Much of the information presented focuses on microinvestigation of the soil and on the effects of soil variability within fields on yields and nutrient flows     Building Mathematical Models in Excel Christopher Teh Boon Sung,2015-05-18 This book is for agriculturists many of whom are either novices or non computer programmers about how they can build their mathematical models in Microsoft Excel Of all modeling platforms spreadsheets like Excel require the least proficiency in computer programming This book introduces an Excel add in called BuildIt available for free as download that shields users from having to use Excel s VBA Visual Basic for Applications programming language and yet allows agriculturists to build simple to large complex models without having to learn complicated computer programming techniques or to use sophisticated Excel techniques This book first discusses how BuildIt works and how it is used to build models Examples range from the simple to progressively more complex mathematical models Ultimately readers are taught how to build a generic crop growth model from its five core components meteorology canopy photosynthesis energy balance soil water and crop growth development Ultimately agriculturists will be able to build their own mathematical models in Excel and concentrate more on the science and mathematics of their modeling work rather than being distracted by the intricacies of computer programming
