

TYPES OF REASONABLE ACCOMMODATION IN THE WORKPLACE

RESERVED PARKING

If you have a disability that limits the distances you can comfortably walk or wheel, your employer may reserve a parking spot closer to the building. This is a common enough accommodation that many workplaces have multiple accessible parking spots clearly designated for individuals with disabilities.

SERVICE DOG EXCEPTIONS

Many workplaces have a "no animals" policy so that employees stay on task and the workspace remains clean and free of animal dander. However, service dogs are a common exception to this rule. If you need the assistance of a service dog to help you manage your disability, talk to your employer about making an exception.

Should your boss give you the green light to bring your service dog to work, fit the dog with a vest that clearly marks them as a service animal. Make it clear to your colleagues that your dog isn't just a companion and that they should not try to pet or distract your dog.

MODIFIED WORK SCHEDULE

If you need to alter your schedule to accommodate your disability, bring those concerns to your boss and be open to negotiating a fair and reasonable new schedule. For example, you may be able to work four 10-hour shifts per week instead of five 8-hour shifts to secure an additional weekend day.

The Basics of Reasonable Accommodation in the Federal Workplace Allison B. Uehling, 2003

Reasonable Accommodation Requests: Fair Evaluation and the Role of Decision Makers Mona Hawkins, 2023 The purpose of this qualitative study was to examine fair evaluations and the role of the decision makers in the reasonable accommodation process In many instances fair evaluations in the reasonable accommodation process which disabled employees experienced were challenging and looked upon as perceived discrimination in decision making process A review of the literature identified further clarification and insight into educating decision makers about the disability laws and then altering their behavior in granting reasonable accommodations The literature progressed with discussions surrounding why every qualified disabled employee should be accommodated as long as the reasonable accommodation is not an undue hardship to the agency Finally the review identified how federal agencies could best support disabled employees by reassigning the role of the decision maker into a support role and allowing an independent agency to decide the reasonable accommodations request for a fair evaluation Through semi structured interviews with the decision makers and advisors who were all experts in the field on Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 Chamusco 2017 the data was collected analyzed and then coded to reveal significant themes representing the best strategies for disabled employees to receive reasonable accommodations In addition to themes the researcher provided a model for educating and training employers to implement the strategy and tactics suggested by removing the challenges disabled employees face in the reasonable accommodation requests and decision making process as the starting point in eliminating discrimination
