Recent Developments In Alcoholism Vol 7 Treatment Research:

Recent Developments in Alcoholism Marc Galanter, 2013-11-22 From the President of the Research Society on Alcoholism In recent years increasingly convincing evidence in support of a biobehavioral conceptual model of the etiology of alcoholism has emerged In this model the disorder is perceived as arising from the interaction of genetic/biological vulnerability and psychosocial risk Drinking or alcohol seeking is a metric trait Alcoholism which is a state of abnormally intense alcohol seeking behavior that over time leads to the alcohol dependence syndrome lies at the extreme high end of this quantitative measure Metric traits are influenced by multiple genes the extent of genetic loading of biological risk for alcoholism would be different in different individuals Added to this kind of variability is the wide range of options for exposure to the psychosocial risk factors of heavy drinking provided by modern society Further environmental provocation also changes when life events change It is not surprising therefore from the combination of the kinds of genetic and environmental variability described above that there is a wide array of patterns of expression of the disorder alcoholism referred to by some as alcoholisms In the search for understanding of underlying mechanisms and rational bases for potential therapy it is important to focus our attention on the final common pathway of this disorder alcohol seeking behavior This series ever since its beginning in 1983 has been sensitive to the complexities of the interaction between biological and psychosocial risk factors in alcoholism

Alcoholic Thinking Danny M. Wilcox, 1998-03-25 Based on long term observation of Alcoholics Anonymous the author focuses on cultural rather than personal causes of drug dependence The author also discusses how the symbolic action of AA language and culture is the key to recovery This study yields critical information about the development and practice of alcoholism and other drug dependence Through the shared linguistic and cultural interaction of AA the U S cultural ideology that emphasizes individualism personal achievement self control and self reliance is shown to result in conflict thus the gap
