This volume investigates various processes by which world religions become localized as well as how local traditions in Southeast Asia and Melanesia become universalized. In the name of modernity and progress the contemporary Southeast Asian states tend to press their populations to have a religion claiming that their local indigenous practices and traditions do not constitute religion. Authors analyze this religionization addressing how local people appropriate religion as a category to define some of their practices as differentiated from others whether they want to have a religion or are constrained to demonstrate that they profess one. Thus religion is what is regarded as such by these local actors which might not correspond to what counts as religion for the observer. Furthermore local actors do not always concur regarding what their religion is about as religion is a contested issue. In consequence each of the case studies in this volume purposes to elucidate what gets identified and legitimized as religion by whom for what purpose and under what political conditions.

The Politics of Religion in Indonesia Michel Picard, Rémy Madinier, 2011-05-13 Indonesia is a remarkable case study for religious politics. While not being a theocratic country it is not secular either with the Indonesian state officially defining what constitutes religion and every citizen needing to be affiliated to one of them. This book focuses on Java and Bali and the interesting comparison of two neighbouring societies shaped by two different religions: Islam and Hinduism. The book examines the appropriation by the peoples of Java and Bali of the idea of religion through a dialogic process of indigenization of universalist religions and universalization of indigenous religions. It looks at the tension that exists between proponents of local world views and indigenous belief systems and those who deny those local traditions as qualifying as a religion. This tension plays a leading part in the construction of an Indonesian religious identity recognized by the state. The book is of interest to students and scholars of Southeast Asia, religious studies and the anthropology and sociology of religion.

The Cambridge History of Southeast Asia: Volume 2, The Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries Nicholas Tarling, 1992 Southeast Asia has long been seen as a unity although other terms have been used to describe it: Further India, Little China, the Nanyang. The region has had a protracted maritime history. Confucianism, Buddhism, Islam, Hinduism, Christianity are all represented. It has seen a quintet of colonial powers: Britain, France, The Netherlands, Spain, the United States. Most recently it has become one of the fastest growing parts of the world economy. The very term Southeast Asia is clearly more than a geographical expression. The Cambridge History of Southeast Asia is a multi-authored treatment of the whole of mainland and island Southeast Asia from Burma to Indonesia. Unlike other histories of the region it is not divided on a country-by-country basis and is not structured purely chronologically but rather takes a thematic and regional approach to Southeast Asia's history. This volume, the second and final in the series, takes us into the nineteenth and twentieth centuries from the late eighteenth century of the Christian era when most of the region was incorporated into European empires to the complexity and dramatic change of the post-World War II period. It covers the economic and social life as well as the religious and popular culture of the region as they develop over two centuries. The political structures of the region are also closely examined from the insurgencies and rebellions of early this century to the modern Nationalist movements which challenged the control of the colonial powers and led to the formation of independent states Under the editorship of Nicholas Tarling Professor of History at the University of Auckland New Zealand each chapter is well integrated into the whole Professor Tarling has assembled a highly respected team of international scholars who have presented the latest historical research on the region and succeeded in producing a provocative and exciting account of the region s history      The Cambridge History of Southeast Asia: Volume 2, Part 2, From World War II to the Present Nicholas Tarling,1999 Volume 2 Part 2 covers the period from World War II to the present
