Second Lining:

Dancing the Politics of Pleasure at the New Orleans Second Line Rachel Carrico, 2024-10-22 On many Sundays Black New Orleanians dance through city streets in Second Lines These processions invite would be spectators to join in grooving to an ambulatory brass band for several hours Though an increasingly popular attraction for tourists parading provides the second liners themselves with a potent public expression of Black resistance Rachel Carrico examines the parading bodies in motion as a form of negotiating and understanding power Seeing pleasure as a bodily experience Carrico reveals how second liners moves link joy and liberation self and communal identities play and dissent and reclamations of place As she shows dancers choices allow them to access the pleasure of reclaiming self and city through motion and rhythm while expanding a sense of the possible in the present and for the future In depth and empathetic Dancing the Politics of Pleasure at the New Orleans Second Line blends analysis with a chorus of Black voices to reveal an indelible facet of Black culture in the Crescent City

Second Line Treatment of Non-Small Cell Lung Cancer: Clinical, Pathological and Molecular Aspects of Novel Promising Drugs Umberto Malapelle, Pierlorenzo Pallante, 2017-08-29 Lung cancer still remains a challenging disease with a higher mortality rate in comparison to other cancers The discovery of oncogene addicted tumours and targeted therapies responsive to these targets lead to a meaningful change in the prognosis of these diseases Unfortunately these newer therapeutic options are reserved to a minor part of lung cancer patients harbouring specific mutations In the so called wild type population the first line options bring the median overall survival to go beyond 1 year and in the population receiving the maintenance therapy over 16 months. Given these results, more than 60% of patients may receive a second line therapy with further opportunities to improve the length and quality of life. For patients not harbouring targetable DNA mutations, newer options will be available for second line therapeutic schemes and two major assets seem to be promising: immune modulation and anti-angiogenic agents. In particular, anti-PD1/PDL1 antibodies, VEGFR antibodies and TKIs, these latter combined with standard chemotherapy (docetaxel), advance the median overall survival of 12 months. These drugs have a different mechanism of action, various adverse events and their activity is different depending on the types of population. However, the biomarkers activity and efficacy prediction are not fully or totally understood. In addition, also for patients with DNA targetable mutations, new drugs seem to be promising for the use in the second line therapeutic protocols. In particular, drugs selectively directed against ALK translocation and mutational events and EGFR T790M secondary mutations seem to be very promising. In this Research Topic, we critically discuss the older therapies and the historical development of second line putting in perspective the new agents available in clinical practice. We discuss their importance from a clinical point of view but also consider and exploit the complex molecular mechanisms responsible of their efficacy or of the subsequently observed resistance phenomena. In this perspective, the uncovering and characterization of novel predictive biomarkers by NGS technology, the characterization of novel actors in the signal transduction pathway modulating the response of the cells, the optimization of new diagnostic tool as the evaluation of liquid biopsy and the implementation of more suitable pre-clinical models are crucial aspects dissected too. Nivolumab, nintedanib and ramucirumab probably will give the opportunity to improve the efficacy outcomes for the treatment of wild type tumours in second line therapeutic schemes but many aspects should be debated in order that these agents are made available to patients planning ahead a therapeutic strategy beginning from the first line therapy to the subsequent ones in a logical and affordable manner. As well for treatment of mutated tumours, mutated EGFR irreversible inhibitors such as rociletinib and AZD9291 and ALK targeting drugs ceritinib and alectinib will also play an important role in the immediate future. Probably the right way is to give all the available opportunities to patients but challenges and pitfalls should be carefully debated and by launching this Research Topic we tried to give some practical insights in this changing landscape. Jackson, 1964

Calvin Trillin, 2016-06-28. From bestselling author and beloved New Yorker writer Calvin Trillin, a deeply resonant career spanning collection of articles on race and racism from the 1960s to the present. In the early sixties Calvin Trillin got his start as a journalist covering the Civil Rights Movement in the South. Over the next five decades of reporting, he often returned to scenes of racial tension. Now for the first time, the best of Trillin's pieces on race in America have been collected in one volume. In the title essay of Jackson 1964, we experience Trillin's riveting coverage of the pathbreaking voter registration drive known as the Mississippi Summer Project, coverage that includes an unforgettable airplane conversation between Martin Luther King Jr. and a young white man sitting across the aisle. I'd like to be loved by everyone, King tells him, but we can't always wait for love In the years that follow Trillin rides along with the National Guard units assigned to patrol black neighborhoods in Wilmington Delaware reports on the case of a black homeowner accused of manslaughter in the death of a white teenager in an overwhelmingly white Long Island suburb and chronicles the remarkable fortunes of the Zulu Social Aid they're personal Dorothy Butler Gilliam The New York Times Book Review Editor's Choice These pieces will continue to be read for the pleasure they deliver as well as for the pain they describe The New York Times With the diligent clarity humane wit polished prose and attention to pertinent detail that exemplify Trillin's journalism at its best Jackson 1964 drives home a sobering realization Even with signs of progress racism in America is news that stays news USA Today These unsettling tales elegantly written and wonderfully reported are like black and white snapshots from the national photo album They depict a society in flux but also stubbornly unmoved through the decades when it comes to many aspects of race relations The grace Trillin brings to his job makes his stories all the more poignant The Christian Science Monitor An exceptional collection from master essayist Trillin Booklist starred review
