Shigeru Yasuda's studio was situated in a series of rooms along the 20th Street to Broadway subway alignment. A distinctive difference with most other studios in the New York area during the early 20th century was that Yasuda's studio was not located in a building owned by the artist. An illuminating reference, Harriet's 40th Birthday Party, by Linda and Thomas Miller, is dated 1969, the year the staff moved across to Northampton City Hall. Although the caption for the photograph of Harriet's birthday party reads "Harriet's 40th Birthday Party," the actual photograph was taken at the 40th birthday party with many other staff members and guests. Harriet's 40th birthday party took place on 10 May 1969, a day that is strongly marked in the office's history, coinciding with many events. At that momentous point, Harriet was 59, she was living alone at age 59, Harriet's husband, James, had been away for a couple of weeks, and Harriet was, well, over 40!
