Rider Haggard, 2017-07-26 Nada the Lily Nada the Lily - Original Edition Sir H Rider Haggard, 2020-11-23 On the third day he asked Zweete how it was that his left hand was white and shriveled and who were Umslopogaas and Nada of whom he had let fall some words Then the old man told him the tale that is set out here Day by day he told some of it till it was finished It was the past that spoke to his listener telling of deeds long forgotten of deeds that are no more known And because the history of Nada the Lily and of those with whom her life was intertwined moved him strangely and in many ways he has done more he has printed it that others may judge of it You ask me my father to tell you the tale of the youth of Umslopogaas holder of the iron Chieftainess the axe Groan maker who was named Bulalio the Slaughterer and of his love for Nada the most beautiful of Zulu women It is long but you are here for many nights and if I live to tell it it shall be told Strengthen your heart my father for I have much to say that is sorrowful and even now when I think of Nada the tears creep through the horn that shuts out my old eyes from light Do you know who I am my father You do not know You think that I am an old old witch doctor named Zweete So men have thought for many years but that is not my name Few have known it for I have kept it locked in my breast lest thought I live now under the law of the White Man and the Great Queen is my chieftainess an assegai still might find this heart did any know my name Look at this hand my father no not that which is withered with fire look on this right hand of mine You see it though I who am blind cannot But still within me I see it as it was once Ay I see it red and strong red with the blood of two kings Listen my father bend your ear to me and listen I am Mopo ah I felt you start you start as the regiment of the Bees started when Mopo walked before their ranks and from the assegai in his hand the blood of Chaka dropped slowly to the earth I am Mopo who slew Chaka the king I killed him with Dingaan and Umhlangana the princes but the wound was mine that his life crept out of and but for me he would never have been slain I killed him with the princes but Dingaan I and one other slew alone What do you say Dingaan died by the Tongola Yes yes he died but not there he died on the Ghost Mountain he lies in the breast of the old Stone Witch who sits aloft forever waiting for the world to perish But I also was on the Ghost Mountain In those days my feet still could travel fast and vengeance would not let me sleep I travelled by day and by night I found him I and another we killed him ah ah Why do I tell you this What has it to do with the loves of Umslopogaas and Nada the Lily I will tell you I stabbed Chaka for the sake of my sister Baleka the mother of Umslopogaas and because he had murdered my wives and children I and Umslopogaas slew Dingaan for the sake of Nada who was my daughter There are great names in the story my father Yes many have heard the names when the Impis roared them out as they charged in battle I have felt the mountains shake and seen the waters quiver in their sound But where are they now Silence has them and the white men write them down in books I opened the gates of distance for the holders of the names They passed through and they are gone beyond I cut the strings that tied them to the world They fell off Ha ha They fell off Perhaps they are falling still perhaps they creep about their desolate kraals in the skins of snakes I wish I knew the snakes that I might crush them with my heel Yonder beneath us at the burying place of kings there is a hole In that hole lies the bones of Chaka the king who died for Baleka
