The book cover features a collage of images. At the top, a large, close-up image of a person's face with wide, intense eyes is set against a blue, textured background. Below this, a dark, rectangular shape, possibly a window or a screen, is visible. At the bottom, a red-tinted image shows a military vehicle, likely a tank, with soldiers on top. The overall design is dramatic and suggests themes of espionage and psychic warfare.

Anyone who has discussed psychic phenomena with someone trained in science has been told that remote viewing and ESP have no scientific basis. They say the claims of remote viewing and ESP violate the laws of physics, biology, and reason. This book presents the case that people who debunk remote viewing and ESP are living in the past in terms of science. Physics has now gone beyond Einstein's hundred-year-old four-dimensional horizon. In this book, the author presents the concepts of recent advances in physics in easily understood lay terms. He also describes biologic functions that support remote viewing. Many compelling experiments and findings are described, including synchronized fireflies, empathetic yogurt, oscillating fish tank filters, and twins separated at birth. The review of the twenty-five-year history of highly classified psychic spying adds a foundation for claims that remote viewing is scientifically valid. The metaphor of our mind as an internet browser is used to simplify understanding of remote viewing and ESP.
