Bornstein, 2003-09-30 How did the 1990s and early 21st century impact the evolution of the college presidency The legitimacy and performance of higher education were called into question during this period and respect for some of its leaders declined An economic downturn and the concomitant change of student enrollment patterns have required presidents to lead in compromised conditions The new emphasis on financial management and fund raising has opened the job of academic president to those with nontraditional backgrounds These new presidents must gain legitimacy differently from those of more traditional backgrounds who are struggling with their own legitimacy challenges In order to understand legitimacy Bornstein has applied theory from the social sciences and higher education literature proposing five factors that influence presidential legitimacy Individual Institutional Environmental Technical and Moral She also proposes six threats to legitimacy Lack of Cultural Fit Management Incompetence Misconduct Erosion of Social Capital Inattentiveness and Gradiosity In light of these threats she suggests strategies for gaining and maintaining legitimacy This book focuses on the impetus for leading change Bornstein draws on numerous sources for a theoretical perspective on the factors associated with the president's role in creating legitimate change She proposes a construct of four factors to implement legitimate change Presidential Leadership Governance Social Capital and Fund Raising The concepts of transformational and transactional leadership are examined for their ability to facilitate change Bornstein finds their effectiveness limited and proposes transformative leadership a contextual approach that fits between transformational and transactional leadership in the conceptual continuum Since presidents are often recruited on the basis of their academic experience their legitimacy depends on securing resources to strengthen or transform their institution fund raising is essential Making Place through Ritual Lea Schulte-Droesch, 2018-09-10

Indian indigenous societies are especially known for their elaborate rituals which offer an excellent chance for studying religion as practice However few detailed ethnographic works exist on the ritual practices of these societies Based on long term ethnographic fieldwork in Jharkhand India this book offers insights into contemporary previously not described rituals of the Santal one of the largest indigenous societies of Central India Its focus lies on culturally specific notions of place as articulated and created during these rituals In three chapters the book discusses how the Santal make place on different local regional and global levels through their rituals They reaffirm their ancestral roots in their land during large sacrificial rituals They offer sacrifices to the dangerous deities of the forest in exchange for rain And they claim their region to be a Santal region through large festivals celebrated in sacred groves which they link to national and global discourses of indigeneity and environmentalism Through an analysis of the rituals of a specific society this book addresses broader issues It presents an example of how to study religion as a practical activity It portrays culture specific perceptions of the environment And last the book underlines the potential that lies in choosing place as a lens to study social phenomena in context
