Spaces for the Sacred Philip Sheldrake, 2001-01-31 In Spaces for the Sacred Philip Sheldrake brilliantly reveals the connection between our rootedness in the places we inhabit and the construction of our personal and religious identities Based on the prestigious Hulsean Lectures he delivered at the University of Cambridge Sheldrake's book examines the sacred narratives which derive from both overtly religious sites such as cathedrals and secular ones like the Millennium Dome and it suggests how Christian theological and spiritual traditions may contribute creatively to current debates about place

Sacred Space for the Missional Church William R. McAlpine, 2011-02-14 Sacred Space for the Missional Church examines the strong link between the theology and mission of the Church and the spaces in which and from which that theology and mission are lived out The author demonstrates that the built environment is not incidental or even subservient to mission Rather it is a key player in the fulfillment and the communication of that mission The book begins with a working definition of the missional church underscoring the connection between God's mission missio Dei and the Church's mission The reader is presented with historical and theological frameworks for sacred space and reminded of the pivotal role of the built environment in the fulfillment of the mission of the Church The design and construction of sacred spaces are shown to be fundamentally a theological exercise and not solely a matter of function pragmatics and fiscal astuteness The author questions the uncritical application of blanket statements such as form must follow function and challenges the conviction that it does not matter where worship occurs only that it occurs The book addresses genuine concerns such as legitimizing the cost of church buildings and concludes with practical suggestions and essential questions that must be considered in posturing the built environment within the missional praxis of the Church
