

Aspects of Coleridge's theory of imagination

In Coleridge's works there are surprisingly few references to his theory of the imagination. His famous remarks that climax Book XIII of Biographia Literaria are inadequate as an exposition of a theory of the imagination: he does not define imagination per se at all, but instead subdivides it into two categories, primary and secondary imagination. For a more concise account of imagination itself one must turn to a statement in "The Statesman's Manual", in which Coleridge describes imagination as "that reconciling and mediatory power, which incorporating the reason in images of the sense, and organizing (as it were) the flux of the senses by the permanent and self-circling energies of the reason, gives birth to a system of symbols, harmonious in themselves, and consubstantial with the truths of which they are the conductors."

This statement reveals first that imagination is not a "faculty" of the mind, but is instead a process of activity within the mind, in which diverse elements in the external world are harmonized into a "gestalt". In this process the universal truths are connected with the concrete images and percepts then formed, with the aid of reason, into ideas. Thus these ideas are formed when the concrete form and the associated universal truth are processed together. Coleridge defines an idea as an "educt of the imagination actuated by pure reason."²

This remark involves four major elements: the universal truths; the concrete forms of the natural world; the mind and senses of the individual; and the end product of the interaction of the first three elements, namely the symbols, or ideas, or art. Coleridge defined the symbol as the "conductor" of truth, which should be "characterized by a translucence of the special in the individual, or of the general in the special, or of the universal in the general; above all by the translucence of the eternal through and in the temporal."³ This seems to say, rather clumsily, that the symbol reveals the universal truth and the particular expression of that truth at the one time. All of this points to the central creed of the great romantic poets in England, Germany and France, namely "the great endeavour to overcome the split between subject and object, the self and the world, the conscious and the unconscious."⁴

Side-stepping the issue of "reason" temporarily, it is necessary to examine further the nature of the process of imagination. Coleridge called the imagination an esemplastic power, an adjective which he coined from the Greek words meaning "to shape into one."⁵ Thus imagination operates esemplastically, unifying normally separated elements in the universe of perception. This is clarified by other statements by Coleridge: "The imagination modifies images, and gives unity to variety; it sees all things in one."⁶ This basic principle is expressed forcefully in The Friend: "Every power in nature and in spirit must evolve an opposite, as the sole means and condition of its manifestation: and all opposition is a tendency to re-union . . . The identity of thesis and antithesis is the substance of all being."⁷

Method and Imagination in Coleridge's Criticism J.R. de J. Jackson, 2016-06-17 First published in 1969 this book places Coleridge's literary criticism against the background of his philosophical thinking examining his theories about criticism and the nature of poetry Particular attention is paid to the structure of Biographia Literaria Coleridge's distinction between Imagination and Fancy his definitions of the poetic characters of Shakespeare and Wordsworth his analysis of the mental state of audiences in theatres and his interpretations of Paradise Lost Hamlet and Aeschylus Prometheus The emphasis throughout is on how Coleridge thought rather than what he thought and the process rather than the conclusions of his criticism

A Flash of Golden Fire Thomas Elsner, 2025-05-01 In the early twentieth century C G Jung survived an intense encounter with the unconscious He did this by giving expression to his inner world in the paintings and dialogues found in the Red Book Yet Jung felt alone in this work unable to find a precedent or cultural parallel until he discovered alchemy This ancient protoscience became the bridge Jung had been seeking between the remote past and the present Yet between the downfall of alchemy in the eighteenth century and Jung's Red Book in the twentieth it seems that there was a gap in the tradition According to Jungian analyst and author Thomas Elsner Samuel Taylor Coleridge's great visionary poem The Rime of the Ancient Mariner is another link in that golden chain In Elsner's analysis Coleridge's nineteenth century night sea journey can today be understood as a symbolic self portrait of the collective unconscious a self portrait that like the Red Book finds its historical context and continuity in the alchemical tradition Continuing the highly esteemed works arising from the Fay Lecture Series sponsored by the Jung Center Houston Elsner's A Flash of Golden Fire: The Birth, Death and Rebirth of the Modern Soul in Coleridge's The Rime of the Ancient Mariner promises to further extend the understanding and appreciation of Jungian principles for practitioners analysts others interested in Jungian theory and practice the psychological dimensions of Romantic poetry and the evolution of Western consciousness Humanities National Endowment for the Nervous Reactions Joel Faflak, Julia M. Wright, 2012-02-01 Nervous Reactions considers Victorian responses to Romanticism particularly the way in which the Romantic period was frequently constructed in Victorian era texts as a time of nervous or excitable authors and readers at odds with Victorian values of self restraint moderation and stolidity Represented in various ways as a threat to social order as a desirable freedom of feeling as a pathological weakness that must be cured this nervousness both about and of the Romantics is an important though as yet unaddressed concern in Victorian responses to Romantic texts By attending to this nervousness the essays in this volume offer a new consideration not only of the relationship between the Victorian and Romantic periods but also of the ways in which our own responses to Romanticism have been mediated by this Victorian attention to Romantic excitability Considering editions and biographies as well as literary and critical responses to Romantic writers the volume addresses a variety of discursive modes and genres and brings to light a number of authors not normally included in the longstanding category of Victorian Romanticism on the Romantic
