Seeds Of Crisis Public Schooling In Milwaukee Since 19:

Seeds of Crisis John L. Rury, Frank A. Cassell, 1993 Beset by such controversies as whether they have the right to search students lockers for guns and drugs big city schools are making adjustments unimaginable in earlier eras when detention was still sufficient for keeping order Milwaukee Wisconsin is one city trying to cope with the educational challenges of the twentieth century Seeds of Crisis examines the ways in which these challenges have affected the politics of education the curriculum the work of teachers and principals and the everyday lives of students in Milwaukee Since the problems facing urban schools are similar from city to city a close and careful look at the historical roots and origins of the situation in Milwaukee can serve as a model for those working on solutions in other places The contributors touch on topics from curriculum to desegregation in the Milwaukee public schools setting the schools histories within a broader context of the changing urban scene and educational policy issues Taken together these essays offer an unusual perspective on the development of a major urban school system as it prepares to face the future

The African American Struggle for Secondary Schooling, 1940-1980 John L. Rury, Shirley A. Hill, 2015-04-24 This is the first comprehensive account of African American secondary education in the postwar era Drawing on quantitative datasets as well as oral history this compelling narrative examines how African Americans narrowed the racial gap in high school completion The authors explore regional variations in high school attendance across the United States and how intraracial factors affected attendance within racial groups They also examine the larger social historical context such as the national high school revolution the civil rights movement campaigns to expand schooling and urging youth to stay in school and Black migration northward Closing chapters focus on desegregation and the urban crisis of the 1960s and 1970s that accelerated White flight and funding problems for urban school systems The conclusion summarizes these developments and briefly looks at the period since 1980 when secondary attainment levels stopped advancing for Blacks and Whites alike

Book Highlights A comprehensive history drawing on statistical analysis archival research and interviews with African Americans who attended school in the 1940s and 1950s Lessons from the past showing how parents and local communities played the most direct and dynamic role in the fight for access to education Today's major challenges including the growth of inner city poverty and changing family structures John L Rury is professor of education and by courtesy history at the University of Kansas Shirley A Hill is professor of sociology at the University of Kansas Based on prodigious research The African American Struggle for Secondary Schooling sets a new standard of excellence in social history and policy studies The authors evocatively recreate the passions of the civil rights movement and centrality of public schools in the ongoing quest for justice opportunity and freedom William J Reese Carl F Kaestle WARF Professor of Educational Policy Studies and History University of Wisconsin Madison This book is a rich and compelling addition to the literature on secondary education generally and on secondary education for African Americans specifically It will set the standard for historical studies on American high schools for a long time to come Jeffrey

Mirel David L Angus Collegiate Chair of Education Professor of History University of Michigan The African American Struggle for Secondary Schooling fills a major gap in the history of African American educational history This book will be on my shelf and will no doubt be on the shelves of scholars and students who study African American educational history

Thomas V O'Brien Professor and Chair Department of Educational Studies and Research University of Southern Mississippi This is the only book length account of the growth and impact of secondary education for African Americans post 1930 With a unique and original analysis the authors frame key themes not only within the common historiographical tradition of an unfolding of growth and development over time but correctly understand that high school entailed opportunities for attainment in a broader social sense as well

Michael Fultz Professor Department of Educational Policy Studies University of Wisconsin Madison African-Centered Schooling in Theory and Practice Cheryl S. Ajirotutu, Diane S. Pollard, 2000-04-30 Although schools with an African centered educational focus have existed for over 200 years they have most often been independent institutions Within the past few years the idea of incorporating an African and African American cultural orientation in public schools has been explored This exploration has proceeded in a number of ways in Baltimore MD African centered education was instituted in selected classrooms within an otherwise traditional school In Milwaukee and in other cities such as Detroit MI and Washington DC African centered programs have been implemented in selected schools The Politics Of Education And The New Institutionalism William Lowe Boyd, Robert L. Crowson, Hanne M. Mawhinney, 2015-12-22 This is an assessment of the reluctance of American education institutions to undergo change and reform at a time when it is considered necessary The lack of public confidence in educational institutions is discussed along with the subsequent consequences Urban Education in the United States J. Rury, 2005-05-16 Urban Education in the United States examines the development of schools in the large cities of the USA John Rury a well known historian of education introduces and highlights the most significant and classic essays dealing with urban schooling in this collection Urban Education in the United States will provide an introduction to critical themes in the history of city schools and will frame each section with an overview of urban education research during particular periods in US history Education and Social Change John Rury, John L. Rury, 2010-04-02 First Published in 2002 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company Controlling Public Education Kathryn A. McDermott, 1999 Most Americans believe that local school districts are the only means by which citizens may exercise control over public education Kathryn McDermott argues to the contrary that existing local institutions are no longer sufficient for achieving either equity or democratic governance Not only is local control inequitable it also fails to live up to its reputation for guaranteeing public participation and citizen influence Drawing upon democratic theory and the results of field research in New Haven Connecticut and three suburbs McDermott contends that our educational system can be made more democratic by centralizing control over funding while decentralizing most authority over schools to the level of schools themselves while enacting public school choice controlled for racial balance To many people in Connecticut and elsewhere the tension between equal opportunity for all students and local control of public education seems impossible to resolve In 1996 the Connecticut Supreme Court ruled in Sheff v O'Neill that local control produces unconstitutional segregation of public schools Nearly all of the state's 169 towns operate their own public schools and like the towns they serve the schools are generally homogeneous with respect to race and socioeconomic class In the Sheff ruling the court declared that making school districts coterminous with town lines is the single most important factor contributing to the present concentration of racial and ethnic minorities in the Hartford public school system At the same time the court also acknowledged that the town based school system presently furthers the legitimate nonracial interests of permitting considerable local control and accountability in educational matters In Connecticut and elsewhere it has often seemed necessary to choose between local control and equity in public education and local control has almost always won McDermott argues that rather than seeing local control and equity as conflicting goals policymakers should regard them as equally important components of democracy in public education In her view a truly democratic system of education should both encourage citizen participation in school governance and contribute to the formation and maintenance of a social order in which equality of opportunity prevails over hierarchies of privilege Centralizing distribution of resources and using controlled choice to end racial isolation would provide greater equality of opportunity while decentralizing management of schools would expand citizen participation McDermott's conclusions break new ground in our understanding of local school governance itself and call into question the conventional wisdom about local participation These findings should interest those who study school governance and reform especially in an urban setting as well as policy makers administrators teachers students and citizens eager to improve their schools

Democracy, Deliberation, and Education Robert Asen, 2015-08-13 The local school board is one of America s enduring venues of lay democracy at work In Democracy Deliberation and Education Robert Asen takes the pulse of this democratic exemplar through an in depth study of three local school boards in Wisconsin In so doing Asen identifies the broader democratic ideal in the most parochial of American settings Conducted over two years across racial ethnic and socioeconomic lines Asen s research reveals as much about the possibilities and pitfalls of local democracy as it does about educational policy From issues as old as racial integration and as contemporary as the recognition of the Gay Straight Alliance in high schools Democracy Deliberation and Education illustrates how ordinary folks build and sustain their vision for a community and its future through consequential public decision making For all the research on school boards conducted in recent years no other project so directly addresses school boards as deliberative policymaking bodies Democracy Deliberation and Education draws from 250 school board meetings and 31 interviews with board members and administrators to offer insight into participants varied understandings of their roles in the complex mechanism of governance

Frederick M. Hess, 2011-04-01 Almost everyone agrees that America s urban schools are a mess But while this agreement has fostered widespread support for aggressive reform Frederick Hess argues that much of what ails urban education is actually the result of continuous or fragmentary reform Hess explains that political incentives drive school superintendents to promote reforms to demonstrate that they are making a difference Superintendents have to do this quickly both because their tenure is usually three years or less and because urban communities are anxious to see educational improvement However the nature of urban school districts makes it very difficult to demonstrate concrete short term improvement The result is what he terms policy churn which distracts teachers and principals from efforts to refine classroom teaching while seldom resulting in successful long term changes Hess argues that policymakers have misallocated resources by pursuing the right structure or the best pedagogy while paying insufficient attention to the more mundane and more important questions of how to implement refine and sustain a particular approach in their particular district Hess explains that previous research on high performing schools suggests that the best schools are characterized by focus and by an ability to develop expertise in specific approaches to teaching and learning To help educators and policymakers adopt and nurture a focused agenda he recommends institutional changes that increase the effectiveness of performance outcomes and reduce the incentives to emphasize symbolic reform

Antiracist Education Julie Kailin,2002 This book combines theory practice and ethnography in an exploration of how teachers can fully implement diversity and antiracism as a foundation of their teaching approach The author a white mother of children of color whose work is influenced by her own experience being raised in an antiracist activist family developed her curriculum over many years of active involvement with parents and teachers in schools She presents her curriculum along with ethnographic reports of the processes of change that teachers experience as they fully explore the realities of race relations its history and the lived experiences of others Kailin shows how immersion in this exploration enables teachers to develop curricula and teaching practices that are effectively antiracist and fully connected to students lives
