Lottermoser,2010-07-09 This book is not designed to be an exhaustive work on mine wastes It aims to serve undergraduate students who wish to gain an overview and an understanding of wastes produced in the mineral industry An introductory textbook addressing the science of such wastes is not available to students despite the importance of the mineral industry as a resource wealth and job provider Also the growing importance of the topics mine wastes mine site pollution and mine site rehabilitation in universities research organizations and industry requires a textbook suitable for undergraduate students Until recently undergraduate earth science courses tended to follow rather classical lines focused on the teaching of palaeontology crystallography mineralogy petrology stratigraphy sedimentology structural geology and ore deposit geology However today and in the future earth science teachers and students also need to be familiar with other subject areas In particular earth science curriculums need to address land and water degradation as well as rehabilitation issues These topics are becoming more important to society and an increasing number of earth science students are pursuing career paths in this sector Mine site rehabilitation and mine waste science are examples of newly emerging disciplines This book has arisen out of teaching mine waste science to undergraduate and graduate science students and the frustration at having no appropriate text which documents the scientific fundamentals of such wastes Global Rangelands A. Matebesi,Lochner Marais,Verna Nel,2024-02-12 This book investigates mine closure and local responses in South Africa linking dependencies and social disruption Mine closure presents a major challenge to the mining industry and government policymakers globally but particularly in the Global South South Africa is experiencing notable numbers of mine closures and this book explores the notion of social disruption a concept often applied to describe the effects of mine growth on communities but often neglecting the impact of mine closures The book begins with three theoretical chapters that discuss theory closure cost frameworks and policy development in South Africa It uses evolutionary governance theory to show how mining creates dependencies and how mining growth often blinds communities and governments to the likelihood of closure Too easily mining goes ahead with no concern for the possibility or indeed inevitability of eventual closure and how mining communities will cope These impacts are showcased through eight place based case studies from across South Africa one focusing on mine workers to demonstrate that mine closure causes significant social disruption This book will be of interest to students and scholars researching the social impacts of mining and the extractive industries social geography and sustainable development as well as policymakers and practitioners working with mine closure and social impact assessments
