The Man Without a Country Edward E. Hale, 2024-11-23 The Man Without a Country first appeared in the Atlantic Monthly for December 1863 It was the author's wish that it be published anonymously in the hope that it might be ascribed to some officer of the Navy but unfortunately the man who compiled the year's index for the magazine which was mailed with the December number recognized Dr Hale's handwriting and gave him credit for it in the index The story was written during the darkest period of the Civil War and this war is perhaps the gloomiest period in the history of our great republic in the history of our great Republic it was written at a time when one half of the people in the United States were burning with patriotism and were ready to lay down their lives to preserve the Union while the other half were striving to disrupt what to them was merely a confederation of States in no wise binding and were damning the United States even as did Philip Nolan at a time when the President was bending low under the weight of sorrow for the loss of thousands of noble men who were falling in battle and was enduring in pitiful silence the vilification that was heaped upon him by the copper head opposition at a time when patriotism was preached in the pulpit sung by our poets and exhaled with every breath The story launched in such an atmosphere met with immediate favor It was reprinted everywhere without regard for copyright and was translated into several foreign languages It was accepted by many as a narrative of actual facts and provoked many discussions as to whether Philip Nolan was a real person some even went so far as to identify him

infernally rebellious Nolan then asks him to bring his copy of the Presbyterian Book of Public Prayer and skim the page where it will automatically open. These are the words: "Most heartily we beseech Thee with Thy power to behold and bless Thy servant the President of the US and every one of others in authority." Nolan says, "I have repeated those prayers night and morning; it's now fifty-five years a day he had read of the US but only within the sort of a prayer to uphold its leaders." The US Navy had neglected to stay this book from him; this is often the supreme irony of the story. Nolan asks him to possess them, bury him within the sea, and have a gravestone placed in memory of him at Fort Adams, Mississippi, or at New Orleans. When he dies later that day, he is found to possess a suitably patriotic epitaph for himself: "In memory of PHILIP NOLAN, Lieutenant within the Army of the US. He loved his country as no other man has loved her, but no man deserved less at her hands." The Man Without a Country, and Other Tales Edward E. Hale, 2017-10-09 Edward Everett Hale April 3 1822 June 10 1909 was an American author, historian, and Unitarian minister. The Man Without a Country is a short story by American writer Edward Everett Hale, first published in The Atlantic in December 1863. It is the story of American Army lieutenant Philip Nolan, who renounces his country during a trial for treason and is consequently sentenced to spend the rest of his days at sea without so much as a word of news about the United States. Though the story is set in the early 19th century, it is an allegory about the upheaval of the American Civil War and was meant to promote the Union cause. Plot summary: The protagonist is a young United States Army lieutenant Philip Nolan, who develops a friendship with the visiting Aaron Burr. When Burr is tried for treason, historically this occurred in 1807, Nolan is tried as an accomplice. During his testimony, he bitterly renounces his nation, angrily shouting, "I wish I may never hear of the United States again." The judge is completely shocked at this announcement, and on convicting him, icily grants him his wish: he is to spend the rest of his life aboard United States Navy warships in exile, with no right ever again to set foot on US soil and with explicit orders that no one shall ever mention his country to him again. The sentence is carried out to the letter. For the rest of his life, Nolan is transported from ship to ship, living out his life as a prisoner on the high seas, never once allowed back in a home port. Though he is treated according to his former rank, nothing of his country is ever mentioned to him. None of the sailors in whose custody Nolan remains is allowed to speak to him about the US, and his newspapers are censored. Nolan is unrepentant at first but over the years becomes sadder and wiser and desperate for news. One day, as he is being transferred to another ship, he beseeches a young sailor never to make the same mistake that he had. "Remember, boy, that behind all these men, behind officers and government and people, even there is the Country Herself, your Country, and that you belong to her as you belong to your own mother. Stand by her, boy, as you would stand by your mother." On one such ship, he attends a party in which he dances with a young lady he had formerly known. He then beseeches her to tell him something, anything about the United States, but she quickly withdraws and speaks no longer to him. Deprived of a homeland, Nolan slowly and painfully learns the true worth of his country. He misses it more than his friends or family, more than art or music or love or nature. Without it, he is nothing. Dying aboard the USS Levant he shows his room to an officer named Danforth it is a little shrine of patriotism The Stars and Stripes are draped around a picture of George Washington Over his bed Nolan has painted a bald eagle with lightning blazing from his beak and claws grasping the globe At the foot of his bed is an outdated map of the United States showing many of its old territories that had unbeknownst to him been admitted to statehood Nolan smiles Here you see I have a country The dying man asks desperately to be told the news of American history since 1807 and Danforth finally relates to him almost all of the major events that have happened to the U S since his sentence was imposed the narrator confesses however that I could not make up my mouth to tell him a word about this infernal rebellion Nolan then asks him to bring his copy of the Presbyterian Book of Public Prayer and read the page where it will automatically open These are the words Most heartily we beseech Thee with Thy favor to behold and bless Thy servant the President of the United States and all others in authority Nolan says I have repeated those prayers night and morning it is now fifty five years The Man Without a Country (Esprios Classics)
