What is nutrition?

Food provides the components of tissue structure and energy. Nutrition describes the chemical nature of nutrients, their use and regulation, the relationship between food intake and growth, energy, the absorption and utilization of nutrients, and the regulation of these processes. Nutrition is the study of the relationship between food intake and the body's requirements for nutrients.

Basal metabolic rate

The basal metabolic rate (BMR) is the amount of energy used while at rest to maintain the body's basic functions. It is the minimum energy required to sustain life.

The rate of the basal metabolic rate and the energy used to maintain the body's basic functions is the basal metabolic rate. It is the energy used to maintain the body's basic functions. It is the energy used to maintain the body's basic functions. It is the energy used to maintain the body's basic functions.

Factors affecting the metabolic rate

- Genetics
- Gender
- Body composition
- Level of activity
- Age
- Environmental factors

Metabolic pathways

The two main types of metabolism are catabolism and anabolism. Catabolism is the breakdown of complex molecules into simpler molecules, releasing energy. Anabolism is the synthesis of complex molecules from simpler molecules, requiring energy.

What is metabolism?

Metabolism is the sum of all the chemical reactions in the body that convert food into energy and building blocks for the body's structure and function.

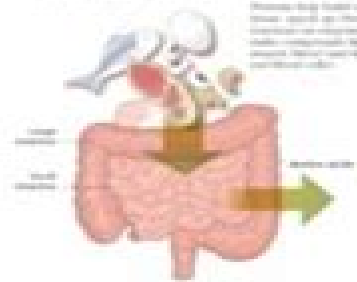

Metabolism is the sum of all the chemical reactions in the body that convert food into energy and building blocks for the body's structure and function. It is the sum of all the chemical reactions in the body that convert food into energy and building blocks for the body's structure and function.

Food metabolism

Food is broken down by digestion into simple molecules that can be absorbed by the body. These simple molecules are then used by the body to produce energy and building blocks for the body's structure and function.

Protein metabolism

Protein is broken down into amino acids, which are then used by the body to produce energy and building blocks for the body's structure and function.

Carbohydrate metabolism

Carbohydrates are broken down into simple sugars, which are then used by the body to produce energy and building blocks for the body's structure and function.

Fat metabolism

Fats are broken down into fatty acids and glycerol, which are then used by the body to produce energy and building blocks for the body's structure and function.
