Management Control In A Voluntary Organization Accounting And Accountants In Organization Context:

Management Control in a Voluntary Organization Peter Booth, 2018-04-17 This book originally published in 1995 is concerned with the study of accounting within its organizational and social context The author analyses accounting as having potential effects at both an ideological level and at an occupational level Empirically it is explored within the context of voluntary organizations as theoretically interesting extreme cases where the conditions for accounting to be significant should be most open to question This title will be of interest to students of business studies and management Accounting Control and Controlling Accounting Jane Broadbent, Richard Laughlin, 2013-05-21 This book critically analyses the extensive forms of societal regulatory requirements using forms of Accounting Control particularly those that are exerted over public sector organisations and the strategies of Controlling Accounting that are used by these organisations to minimise the effects of these requirements The Italian and Iberian Influence in Accounting History Michele Bigoni, Warwick Funnell, 2017-10-02 The Italian and Iberian Influence in Accounting History provides compelling evidence of how accounting when conceived of as a technology rather than simply as a tool to increase efficiency can work as a means to sustain power relations in different sites such as the Church the State or the factory This book drawing upon the growing body of work which focuses on Italy and the Iberian Peninsula demonstrates how accounting practices were effective in the subjugation of single individuals or entire populations whether Roman Catholic priests State functionaries inhabitants of conquered lands or workers The effectiveness of accounting as a tool of power is linked to its neutral and technical appearance which makes it difficult for those oppressed and controlled by its practices to oppose it Its adaptability to different organizational contexts as documented in The Italian and Iberian Influence in Accounting History makes it a valuable tool for sustaining existing power relations and reproducing inequalities and exploitation The Italian and Iberian Influence in Accounting History is vital reading for academics and researchers in the fields of accounting accounting history political management and sociology and European history Money Doctrines - Traditional versus Word of Faith Teaching Kieran James, Christopher Tolliday, 2017-12-09 There has been a significant volume of scholarly work conducted recently within the accounting literature on the role of money investment and accounting within religious organizations However scant attention has been paid to modern Pentecostal understandings of money investment and accounting In this book we study the major money related doctrines of American husband and wife televangelist Faith Teachers Kenneth and Gloria Copeland We find the unique Copeland interpretation of Treasures in Heaven Matthew 6 20 to be a complete inversion of the traditional or Anglican theological interpretation While the traditional interpretation is that this verse refers to future rewards available after death the Copelands argue that it refers to rewards existing now in the heavenly places in what they refer to as the believer s heavenly bank account The Copelands also believe in a literal hundredfold return on monetary and other gifts made for the gospel s sake Mark 10 29 30 Money Doctrines D Traditional versus Word of Faith Teaching Kieran

Ecology, Sustainable Development and Accounting Seleshi Sisaye,2015-08-11 Accounting literature has viewed sustainability in terms of social economic and environmental performances There have been concerns that the relationship between sustainability accounting and organizational performance cannot be explained unless we can deduce patterns of administrative behaviour that chronicle management practices Ecology Sustainable Development and Accounting argues that despite the broader social and economic development dimensions of sustainability and the limitations of its extension to corporate and organizational behaviour an ecological framework is capable of providing the overall societal and community chronologies that describe corporate sustainable operations Drawing examples from international development and federal government organizations this book documents the link between ecology corporate sustainable development and sustainability accounting and reporting It draws together the literature from several disciplines to elaborate the contribution of the ecological approach to sustainable development in the accounting literature This book will be of particular interest to students academics and practitioners in the areas of environmental studies ecological economics sustainable development studies and social and environmental accounting The sociological and anthropological perspectives make this book the first of its kind to apply the population ecology of sociology to both the sustainability and accounting literature American Book Publishing Record ,2003

Accounting and Accountants in Organizational Context Peter James Booth, 1991 Abstract This thesis is concerned with the study of accounting within its organizational and social context As such it seeks to address the problematization of the purposes of accounting within organizations proposed by Hopwood 1978 1983 and other recent writers on the study of accounting in action A major problematic under such an approach is how does accounting obtain and maintain a position of organizational significance Within this thesis this problematic is approached theoretically by analysing accounting as having potential effects at both an ideological level how it influences organizational action as a communication and meaning system and at an occupational level how the significance of accounting is related to the actions of accountants Empirically these issues are explored within the context of voluntary organizations Voluntary organizations were chosen because they are a theoretically interesting extreme case where the conditions for accounting to be significant within organizations should be most open to question Also the voluntary sector is an increasingly important part of modern industrial societies and voluntary organizations have been relatively neglected within the accounting literature The thesis is in two major sections The first section develops the theoretical framework of the study The initial arguments specify certain boundary conditions for accounting to be significant within organizations being the specific features of accounting systems the type of organizations within which they may be most relevant their relation to the managerial function and their effects on the actions of managers It is then proposed that voluntary organizations in general and churches in particular are theoretically interesting sites for the study of the significance of accounting as they should test some of the limits of these boundary conditions From this base the organizational and accounting literatures on management control issues in churches particularly the work of Richard Laughlin 1984 1988 1990a on the Church of England and the writings of Peter Armstrong 1984 1985 1986 1987a 1989a on the relationships between the variations in management control strategies in business organizations the actions of competing occupational groups and the effects of crises are used to develop a critical structuralist framework for the analysis of management control and the use of accounting within voluntary organizations in general and churches more specifically This framework emphasizes the interaction of different forms of organizational control problems within voluntary organizations particularly the tensions between sacred and secular issues in churches the actions of differing occupational groups in particular the confrontations between accountants and occupational groups more concerned with the core ends of voluntary organizations and the impacts of various organizational crises especially the prioritization of accounting by secular financial crises and the prioritization of core ends by associated relevant crises The second section presents a case study of the significance of accounting within the Queensland Synod of the Uniting Church in Australia Accounting is found to be of generally low but variable significance within this organization In particular the budgeting process is found to be the major arena of contestation over the level of significance of accounting The critical structuralist framework developed in the first section is found to have considerable utility in explaining these findings relative to competing efficiency and diffusion arguments Tensions between the clergy and other religious orientated occupational groups and accountants over the use of accounting and the prioritization of secular financial control problems by the financial crisis being experienced by the Queensland Synod were especially relevant to understanding the variable significance of accounting within the Church The findings are then compared to research on churches and voluntary organizations more generally From this it is suggested that the theoretical approach of this thesis may provide the basis of a model of the dynamics of management control and the use of accounting in voluntary organizations It is concluded that further comparative research is needed in this direction to develop such models and further our understanding of accounting as a situated practice
