Religion and Family in a Changing Society

Penny Edgell, 2013-12-03 The 1950s religious boom was organized around the male breadwinner lifestyle in the burgeoning postwar suburbs But since the 1950s family life has been fundamentally reconfigured in the United States How do religion and family fit together today This book examines how religious congregations in America have responded to changes in family structure and how families participate in local religious life Based on a study of congregations and community residents in upstate New York sociologist Penny Edgell argues that while some religious groups may be nostalgic for the Ozzie and Harriet days others are changing knowing that fewer and fewer families fit this traditional pattern In order to keep members with nontraditional family arrangements within the congregation these innovators have sought to emphasize individual freedom and personal spirituality and actively to welcome single adults and those from nontraditional families Edgell shows that mothers and fathers seek involvement in congregations for different reasons Men tend to think of congregations as social support structures and to get involved as a means of participating in the lives of their children Women by contrast are more often motivated by the quest for religious experience and can adapt more readily to pluralist ideas about family structure This Edgell concludes may explain the attraction of men to more conservative congregations and women to nontraditional religious groups

The Family Emotional System Robert J. Noone,, Daniel V. Papero, 2015-10-30 The Family Emotional System An Integrative Concept for Theory Science and Practice presents an ongoing dialogue among scientists family investigators and clinicians related to a natural systems view of the family and human behavior that has been occurring over several decades The concept of the family as an emotional system as defined in Bowen theory is presented as the principal integrative concept underlying this dialogue and an effort to move toward a science of human behavior As a natural system the family forms the immediate and most important context for individual development and may be the most central and important environment shaping brain development across the lifetime of the individual This book explains how the family system can serve as an integrative framework within which specific factual discoveries and hypotheses from many areas of science can be brought together and understood as various manifestations of a coherent whole The Family Emotional System provides understanding of what is entailed in conceptualizing the family as an emotional system a sense of the breadth and depth of knowledge the sciences are contributing to this effort and examples of how this theoretical framework contributes to family research and practice The richness and excitement occurring in the ongoing dialogue between scientists and Bowen family systems practitioners and researchers is captured along with the promise it holds for the study of human behavior
