

Team Training and Resource Management in Health Care: Current Issues and Future Directions

David M. Musson, MD, PhD and Robert L. Helmreich, PhD

Many authorities have suggested that some variant of team training is likely to be an effective means to reduce human error in operating rooms, emergency departments, resuscitation teams and other settings within healthcare where human interaction is common, and where breakdowns in communication and teamwork can have critical consequences. The implementation of formal training in teamwork for healthcare workers, analogous to aviation's crew resource management (or CRM) used to train pilots, was a specific recommendation of the Institute of Medicine's landmark report, To Err is Human: Building a Safer Healthcare System, released in 2000.¹ Indeed, our own research group has made this same recommendation on multiple occasions over recent years.²⁻⁴ Team training is also currently suggested as part of a comprehensive Patient Safety Plan published by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO), the regulatory agency charged with hospital accreditation in the United States.⁵⁻⁶

A major problem, however, is that few clear guidelines exist to help guide the implementation of such recommendations in healthcare settings. In general, training programs designed to improve team skills are a new concept for medicine, particularly for physicians who are trained largely to be self-sufficient and individually responsible for the care they deliver. While many parties acknowledge a need for such training, exactly how to go about developing

Dave Musson is a physician and research psychologist at Human Factors Research Project at The University of Texas at Austin. His primary research interest is in the performance of teams under stress in aviation, space and medicine. Robert Helmreich is a professor of psychology and the director of the Human Factors Research Project at The University of Texas at Austin. He has studied the behavior of aquanauts, astronauts, pilots and other highly trained work groups for over 30 years.

Sloan, 2012-02-02 The striking increase in average life expectancy during the twentieth century rates as one of the major events of our time We are in the midst of a social revolution one rooted not in a new ideology but in our changing population patterns For the first time in human history infants in fortunate nations like ours can expect to live well into their seventies and beyond This demographic revolution increases pressure on resources as it also creates further social change and new opportunities for older persons Such rapid changes have left most people living in the past with their generally negative attitudes about aging and elderly people The same outmoded beliefs are embedded in many of our health care programs In our youth oriented culture most of us still view old people as physically decrepit or in rapid inevitable decline Mentally they are viewed as forgetful or childish with little ability to learn and adapt Socially and economically they are often considered a burden With such stereotypes where is the expectation and encouragement for their continuing capacity to enrich their own lives and to enrich society These deep seated cultural stereotypes do not describe accurately the new wave of elderly persons or their potential contributions to society Today's aging individuals are mostly far from decrepit fewer than 25 percent experience any disability and fewer than 5 percent are in nursing homes Intellectually given new opportunities to learn and grow they thrive Nursing Home Administration James Elmore Allen, 2007 Contains the knowledge essential to prepare for licensure and employment as a nursing home administrator Using as its basis the guidelines of the National Association of Boards of Examiners of Nursing Home Administrators this work includes sections on Distinguishing delirium from dementia Psychosis from agitation GERD and Glycemic control
