Miss Mapp E. F. Benson, 2016-01-19 PREFACE I lingered at the window of the garden room from which Miss Mapp so often and so ominously looked forth To the left was the front of her house straight ahead the steep cobbled way with a glimpse of the High Street at the end to the right the crooked chimney and the church The street was populous with passengers but search as I might I could see none who ever so remotely resembled the objects of her vigilance E F BENSON Lamb House Rye Printed in Great Britain Chapter I Miss Elizabeth Mapp might have been forty and she had taken advantage of this opportunity by being just a year or two older Her face was of high vivid colour and was corrugated by chronic rage and curiosity but these vivifying emotions had preserved to her an astonishing activity of mind and body which fully accounted for the comparative adolescence with which she would have been credited anywhere except in the charming little town which she had inhabited so long Anger and the gravest suspicions about everybody had kept her young and on the boil She sat on this hot July morning like a large bird of prey at the very convenient window of her garden room the ample bow of which formed a strategical point of high value This garden room solid and spacious was built at right angles to the front of her house and looked straight down the very interesting street which debouched at its lower end into the High Street of Tilling Exactly opposite her front door the road turned sharply so that as she looked out from this projecting window her own house was at right angles on her left the street in question plunged steeply downwards in front of her and to her right she commanded an uninterrupted view of its further course which terminated in the disused graveyard surrounding the big Norman church Anything of interest about the church however could be gleaned from a guide book and Miss Mapp did not occupy herself much with such coldly venerable topics Far more to her mind was the fact that between the church and her strategic window was the cottage in which her gardener lived and she could thus see when not otherwise engaged whether he went home before twelve or failed to get back to her garden again by one for he had to cross the street in front of her very eyes E.
