

An artistic illustration of a woman with long, dark, wavy hair, wearing a white, flowing dress and a pearl earring. She is floating in a body of water, looking down at several books that are floating around her. The background is a soft, hazy landscape with mountains and a bright light source, possibly the sun or moon, creating a dreamlike atmosphere.

Testing the National Covenant William F. May, 2011-07-27 Since the end of World War II runaway fears of Soviet imperialism global terrorism and anarchy have tended to drive American foreign policy toward an imperial agenda At the same time uncurbed appetites have wasted the environment and driven the country's market economy into the ditch How can we best sustain our identity as a people and resist the distortions of our current anxieties and appetites Ethicist William F May draws on America s religious and political history and examines two concepts at play in the founding of the country contractual and covenantal He contends that the biblical idea of a covenant offers a more promising way than the language of contract grounded in self interest alone to contain our runaway anxieties and appetites A covenantal sensibility affirms We the people not simply We the individuals or We the interest groups of the United States It presupposes a history of mutual giving and receiving and of bearing with one another that undergirds all the traffic in buying and selling arguing and negotiating that obtain in the rough terrain of politics May closes with an account of the covenantal agenda ahead and concludes with the vexing issue of immigrants and undocumented workers that has singularly tested the covenant of this immigrant nation

Ethics C.D. Broad, 2012-12-06 This volume contains C D Broad's Cambridge lectures on Ethics Broad gave a course of lectures on the subject intended primarily for Part I of the Moral Sciences Tripos every academic year from 1933-34 up to and including 1952-53 except that he did not lecture on Ethics in 1935-36 The course however was frequently revised and the present version is essentially that which he gave in 1952-53 Broad always wrote out his lectures fully beforehand and the manuscript on Ethics although full of revisions is in a reasonably good state But his handwriting is small and close and in places difficult to decipher I therefore fear that some words may have been misread There was an additional complication In the summer of 1953 Broad revised and enlarged two sections of the course namely the section on Moore's theory and that on Naturalistic theories both sections occur in Chapter 4 The revised version of the section on Moore is undoubtedly superior to the earlier version and I have therefore included it But in my opinion this is not true of the new version of the section on naturalistic theories although more comprehensive than the earlier version it is not only repetitive in itself but also repeats sometimes almost verbatim passages which occur elsewhere in the lectures In brief the new version is not fully integrated with the rest of the course
